Prospects Rise For Agreement On Berlin Talks

Gromyko To See Kennedy And Rusk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union were reported Sunday to be moving slowly but steadily toward agreement on negotiations which could produce a compromise settlement of the Berlin crisis.

Talks in Washington this week between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State Dean Rusk are expected to advance prospects for an early high-level meeting to deal with the dispute—probably an East-West foreign ministers conference.

Gromyko is due to see President Kennedy as well as Rusk, and his call at the White House could result in some informal personal message from Kennedy to Soviet Premier Khrushchev. High administration informants say privately, however, the President has no plan to send a personal letter to Khrushchev urging a Berlin settlement.

The more urgent task before Kennedy and Rusk at the moment is to persuade U.S. allies to go along with whatever formula can be evolved. Since Britain has been pressing for negotiations, that means specifically that the United States must concentrate on winning French and West German cooperation. Officials at Bonn and Paris have been critical of U.S. British willingness to seek a compromise deal with the Soviet Union.

Following a series of talks between Gromyko and Rusk in New York, high officials here assume Khrushchev now has full information on U.S. policy on Berlin and its allies consider their vital interests. Rusk is known to have placed heavy stress on Western determination to fight for its basic Berlin rights if necessary.

To Gromyko, Rusk defined Western vital interests in Berlin as being: Continued exercise of the right to maintain U.S., British and French troops in West Berlin; continued free Allied use of the supply lines between Berlin and West Germany; and preservation of the freedom of the people of West Berlin.

It is now up to Khrushchev to decide, U.S. authorities believe, whether he wants to risk war by pushing demands that infringe those interests or whether he will seek a compromise solution short of a military showdown.

Gromyko probably will come here to see Rusk Tuesday or Wednesday, though the time presumably depends on his getting further instructions from Moscow. The two men held three meetings—totaling about 13 hours—in New York in the last two weeks. Their final session ended Saturday afternoon. Rusk then consulted British Foreign Secretary Lord Home just before Home's departure from New York for London. Rusk also returned to Washington Saturday night.

Archbishop Dies Of Heart Attack

ROME (AP)—Archbishop William O. Brady, 62, of St. Paul, Minn., died early Sunday in a Rome hospital where he was under treatment for a heart condition.

Archbishop Brady suffered a heart attack Sept. 23 on a plane bringing him to Rome for meetings of Roman Catholic bishops and the Church Government Preparatory Committee for the forthcoming Ecumenical Council of the Church.

He was hospitalized at once but suffered three more attacks, the last Sunday morning. He died a short time later.

Cosmetic Users Warned By FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Users of cosmetics were advised by the Food and Drug Administration Sunday to beware of any cosmetics claimed to have "mysterious miracle ingredients."

"Cosmetics properly used can help greatly to improve one's appearance," the agency said in a newly revised consumer information booklet entitled "Read the Label."

"But don't fall for products that claim to 'restore youthful skin,' 'grow hair on bald heads,' or other far-fetched promises that appeal to natural desires to be young and attractive."

"The promoters are only interested in your money."

"Beware especially of cosmetics claimed to have some mysterious miracle ingredient, such as 'royal bee jelly,' 'turtle oil,' or something equally outlandish. The cosmetic label is not required to list the ingredients. When they are played up it's for promotional reasons."

"Generally speaking, cosmetics are made of safe materials and the law forbids any poisonous or harmful substances that may injure the normal user if he follows the directions on the label."

Ford, Union Negotiators Are Hopeful

Night Bargaining
Session Is Held;
Deadline Tuesday

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Union and Ford Motor Co. planned their first night bargaining session Sunday night with both sides hopeful they can reach a new contract agreement before a Tuesday strike deadline for 120,000 workers.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther and Ford Vice President Malcolm Denise held a two-hour meeting Sunday afternoon before recessing for dinner and said they expected to meet into the night.

Reuther, asked if he thought the union and Ford could come to terms before the deadline, replied, "I'm an eternal optimist. We're still got problems, but we're working on them."

Denise, "Most Hopeful"

Asked the same question, Denise said, "I remain most hopeful as always."

The union set a 10 a.m. Tuesday deadline for a settlement or a strike but indicated the unofficial deadline was 4 a. m. that day — the time local leaders will get the word "whether a strike is necessary to back up our national demands."

This was revealed when the union took steps to insure its 85 bargaining units at Ford would not jump the gun and go on strike ahead of time like some locals did at General Motors. Wildcat strikes against GM began five days before the official walkout started Sept. 11.

Reuther Cautions Locals

In weekend telegrams to local union officials at Ford, Reuther said it "is imperative that no strike occur unless you receive specific authority for strike action." The officials will be told between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. Tuesday whether to strike at 10 a.m., Reuther said.

If a national settlement is reached, Reuther said "Another deadline will then be immediately established for settlement of unresolved local union demands."

As of late Sunday, agreement still hadn't been reached at 51 bargaining units.

23 U.S. Mayors Tour E. Berlin

BERLIN (UPI) — Twenty-three American mayors, told by the U. S. State Department they would not get much more than a glimpse of East Berlin during their good-will tour, spent nearly three hours in the Eastern sector Sunday.

Traveling in three U. S. Army buses, the mayors passed freely through the Friedrichstrasse border checkpoint for foreigners without any trouble. Not even their passports were checked.

Even more to their surprise than free border travel was their twice being able to get out of the buses and speak with East Berliners, they said.

The mayors, under the sponsorship of the U. S. Conference of Mayors, arrived in West Berlin Saturday, met with West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt and expressed their desire to tell the West Berliners that the United States stands firmly behind that section of the divided city.

Generally, the group was particularly impressed with the black and white contrast between the two sections — the zest and color of the West and the gloom and emptiness of a Sunday afternoon in the East.

10,000 In Ban-The-Bomb Parade At English Port

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — A crowd of 10,000 ban-the-bomb demonstrators paraded Sunday along Blackpool's seaford demanding an immediate end to all nuclear weapons.

"Act now," the demonstrators chanted. "Save humanity before it is too late." They apparently hoped to sway the thinking of Britain's opposition Labor Party which opens its 60th annual conference here Monday.

Despite the size of the parade, every sign indicated the ban-the-bomb people inside and outside the party were in for a major disappointment.

A year ago at Scarborough, Labor Party left-wingers and pacifists succeeded in pushing through a resolution demanding that Britain carry out unilateral nuclear disarmament.

For the past 12 months party leader Hugh Gaitskell has fought against the resolution.

The new conference is expected to reverse the Scarborough decision and thereby greatly increase Gaitskell's authority in the party. Most Labor party members say they are tired of the rows over nuclear policy. They want to close ranks and prepare for the national election which some hope will come as soon as next spring.

Labors hopes arise from the assumption that Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's Conservatives are badly divided on the issue of Britain's possible membership in the six-nation European Common Market.

De Gaulle Goes On Air Tonight In Unity Effort

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle—besieged by the right and assailed by the left—addressed the nation Monday night in a new effort to unify his countrymen.

Frenchmen awaited some word on "where do we go from here" in Algeria, where a Moslem nationalist rebellion and a European rightist counter-rebellion threaten once again to plunge France into a grave political crisis.

De Gaulle spent the weekend in discussion working on his speech, which will be broadcast and televised. As usual, there was wide speculation on what he would say, but no official hint on any specific proposal De Gaulle may make.

This is the background against which the 70-year-old president will speak: In Algeria, European activists, taking their cues from the underground Secret Army organization, relentlessly detonated thundering charges of explosives, damaging homes and business places of those who refuse to join their ranks. Algiers alone counted 21 blasts in 24 hours of Saturday night and Sunday morning.

The renewal of gangland-style tactics came on the eve of what the Secret Army hopes will be an Algeria-wide general strike.

Secret Army tracts have called for a half-hour strike Monday as a sign of solidarity in opposing De Gaulle's plans for self-determination by Algeria's nine million Moslems. Three previous Army calls for sympathy demonstrations drew mixed responses, but were followed by sporadic rioting. The government hopes to cramp the effects of Monday's strike by holding civil servants on the job.

The Secret Army, a clandestine group headed by fugitive ex-Gen. Raoul Salan, has threatened in a series of tracts and radio broadcasts to overthrow De Gaulle and "save Algeria for France."

Fears of a new revolt in Algeria and the possibility De Gaulle would disappear from the political scene have stirred the French moderate left into a flurry of activity.

Food Output Short Of Population Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization reported Sunday world food production during the 1960-61 season failed to keep pace with population increases.

In its annual report, the FAO said preliminary estimates indicate world food production during the 1960-61 season failed to keep pace with population increases.

But the world's increase in population was 1.6 per cent, it said. Nevertheless, world production was 14 per cent above the pre-World War II level, measured on a per capita basis.

The report said production in Communist China declined sharply because of drought and other natural disasters.

Franco Signals OK For New U.S. Base

BURGOS, Spain (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco called Sunday for revision of the U.S.-Spanish military agreement because of what he called the Soviet Union's aggressive activities.

He appeared to give the go-ahead for another major U.S. air base in Spain.

Franco urged "renovation" of the 1953 U.S.-Spanish aid-for-bases agreement at a private meeting of his Cabinet and military leaders as Spain hailed 25 years of Franco rule. His speech to the commanders and ministers later was broadcast on the national radio.

Under the 1953 pact the United States agreed to build three major air bases and a naval installation here for joint U.S.-Spanish use at a cost of more than $350 million.

Discussions have been under way for some time on the possibility of a fourth air base and other military assistance for Spain. Franco in his speech appeared to signal his approval for expansion of U.S.-Spanish defense collaboration in this direction.

He said there are many who believe that "while the Russians could win the battles of peace there was no necessity for them to seek war."

Nevertheless, he said, a threat of war hangs over the world, and the Western peoples should prepare for it, perhaps as a means of avoiding it.

"Since the period of our (U.S.-Spanish) agreement is already four-fifths gone it is necessary that we renew our studies and renovate this agreement in the face of the existing new (world) situation," he said. Franco did not elaborate on this point.

Franco urged closer "general understanding" among all Western nations to meet what he called "the threat of apocalyptic war."

Strike Idles More Ships On W. Coast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—More ships were tied up Sunday by the Pacific Maritime Association strike with prospects dim for any early settlement.

No negotiations were scheduled for the weekend between the Pacific Maritime Association, representing 13 West Coast shipping lines, and the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association, the striking deck officers union.

George Hillenbrand, federal mediator, said there "are no plans as to future meetings."

Three more ships arrived Sunday in San Francisco Bay to be tied up after discharge of perishable cargo. This brought the total tied up here to 12 since the deck officers first posted pickets Friday evening.

Four others were tied up at Portland, two at Seattle and one in Los Angeles.

The union asked hiring changes to spread work among 900 presently unemployed members. About 650 union deck officers were working when the strike was called.

J. Paul St. Sure, president of the Pacific Maritime Association, said the 13 member shipping lines had offered an 11 per cent increase in wages and fringe benefits over the next four years. He said the union demands would amount to a 15 per cent increase immediately.

The PMA said masters and mates now receive wages and benefits ranging from $14,000 to $27,500 a year.

Chinese Reds Mark Takeover With Fanfare

TOKYO (AP) — The Communists celebrated the 12th anniversary of their takeover of China in a Peiping ceremony Sunday. A Peiping broadcast said more than half a million people paraded before Mao Tse-tung and other dignitaries, domestic and foreign.

Soviet stars of yesteryear were missing and the roster of internationally distinguished persons appeared meager among what the Communist New China News Agency reported to be more than 2,000 foreign guests.

Peiping's Mayor Peng Chen, a keynote speaker, assailed the United States as "an enemy of China, the people of the world, and world peace."

Referring to the American-backed Nationalist Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Peng declared: "We are determined to liberate Taiwan (Formosa). The U.S. aggressors must quit our territory."

President Osvaldo Dorticos of Cuba was on the rostrum with Mao, President Liu Shao-chi and Premier Chou En-lai at Tiananmen Square, for the parade through the heart of the capital. Second-level officials of Albania, Poland and Hungary, participated in the review.

Also on hand were King Mahendra and Queen Ratna of Nepal and Queen Mother Elizabeth of Belgium.

The news agency broadcast made no mention of Soviet delegates, though it had earlier reported six Russians headed by Vasily Prokhorov, secretary of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, were to attend.

For Recognition Of
New Syria Regime

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The political ripple from Syria's revolt against the United Arab Republic widened Sunday with a Cairo announcement that President Gamal Abdel Nasser is breaking diplomatic relations with Jordan and Turkey.

Jordan and Turkey were first to recognize the new provisional government set up by conservative Premier Mamoun Kuzbari in Damascus last week.

"President Nasser," Radio Cairo said, "has issued a decision calling for the severing of diplomatic relations with Jordan and Turkey as a result of the hostile attitude adopted by them toward the United Arab Republic and Arab nationalism."

Nasser and Jordan's King Hussein, though partners in the 11-nation Arab League, have feuded off and on for years. Staid relations have been evident between Nasser's administration and Turkey, which is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Nationalist China extended recognition to the Kuzbari administration Sunday. It was not brought out whether Nasser would react in the case of nations so far from the Middle East, where he has been a top spokesman for Arab unity.

Aleppo Uprising Denied

Radio dueling between the Syrians and Egyptians was marked by a roundabout report from Cairo of an uprising in Aleppo, the industrial center of the north, against Kuzbari's rebel regime.

This was promptly denied by Americans living in Aleppo. Reached by telephone from Beirut, they said there was no evidence of renewed fighting.

Cairo attributed its Aleppo story to an intercepted broadcast from an unidentified station. It reported heavy fighting was going on between the people, police and the army.

Radio Damascus countered with a declaration by the Syrian army command that reports from all Syrian districts showed security prevails and life has returned to normal. This was called proof that the people have full confidence in the revolution.

The conflicting reports of fighting and the fact that Syria's borders remained closed indicated, however, that the country still is in a state of tension. Foreign reporters were turned back at border points for the fourth straight day.

There also was a warning by the Syrian army command to "foreign destructive elements" to be quiet or face expulsion.

Syria To Deport Egyptians

Since all the several thousand Egyptians in Syria already were under orders to show up by Monday for deportation, this warning was aimed at other non-Syrian residents and refugees.

Communists have often tried to take a hand in Syrian affairs. Hundreds were rounded up after Syria joined Egypt under President Nasser in the United Arab Republic in 1958.

Without naming names, a Damascus communique reiterated that "foreign destructive elements" have been infiltrating and trying to distort demonstrations and rallies staged in support of the revolution. The revolution's aim, Kuzbari has said, is to give Syria's four million people a constitutionally stable democratic and Socialist life within four months.

Whatever the reason, the Education Ministry announced all schools and universities in Syria will be closed until further notice. Student organizations in the Middle East, as in Latin America, often are active politically.

Prospects Rise For Agreement On Berlin Talks

Gromyko To See Kennedy And Rusk

To Gromyko, Rusk defined Western vital interests in Berlin as being: Continued exercise of the right to maintain U.S., British and French troops in West Berlin; continued free Allied use of the supply lines between Berlin and West Germany; and preservation of the freedom of the people of West Berlin.

It is now up to Khrushchev to decide, U.S. authorities believe, whether he wants to risk war by pushing demands that infringe those interests or whether he will seek a compromise solution short of a military showdown.

Gromyko probably will come here to see Rusk Tuesday or Wednesday, though the time presumably depends on his getting further instructions from Moscow. The two men held three meetings—totaling about 13 hours—in New York in the last two weeks. Their final session ended Saturday afternoon. Rusk then consulted British Foreign Secretary Lord Home just before Home's departure from New York for London. Rusk also returned to Washington Saturday night.

Did Bombing Really Help To Win War?

LONDON (AP) — Controversy raged in Britain's press Sunday over whether the great air bombardment of German cities—estimated to have cost 180,000 German civilian lives—really helped win World War II.

The storm arose after publication of an official history, "The Strategic Air Offensive Against Germany—1939-1945," which suggested: "The will of the German people was not broken and . . . the effect on war production was remarkably small."

The historians who wrote it—Sir Charles Webster and Noble Frankland, 39, a former bomber pilot who is now director of the Imperial War Museum—took 10 years to turn out their 1,600-page report.

They took sharp issue with Britain's wartime chief of bomber command, Sir Arthur (Bomber) Harris, who held that bombing alone could have knocked out Germany if enough bombers had been produced.

They claimed prewar muddle and treasury tight-fistedness sent the Royal Air Force bomber command into battle "ill-equipped and ineffective."

Navigation and bombing were so poor over the Ruhr in 1941, they allege, that only seven out of every hundred aircraft made hits within 75 square miles of the target.

The historians said the 1943-44 air battle of Berlin, which Harris forecast would "cost Germany the war," was actually a defeat, with more than 1,000 bombers lost.

The main fault in British planning, according to Webster and Frankland, was the failure to develop a long-range fighter to defeat the Luftwaffe in battle before bombing could be successful. The Americans were wiser. They used Mustang fighters to wear down the German fighter squadrons and win the air superiority which finally enabled Allied bombers to roam freely over Germany.

Soviet stars of yesteryear were missing and the roster of internationally distinguished persons appeared meager among what the Communist New China News Agency reported to be more than 2,000 foreign guests.

Peiping's Mayor Peng Chen, a keynote speaker, assailed the United States as "an enemy of China, the people of the world, and world peace."

Referring to the American-backed Nationalist Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Peng declared: "We are determined to liberate Taiwan (Formosa). The U.S. aggressors must quit our territory."

President Osvaldo Dorticos of Cuba was on the rostrum with Mao, President Liu Shao-chi and Premier Chou En-lai at Tiananmen Square, for the parade through the heart of the capital. Second-level officials of Albania, Poland and Hungary, participated in the review.

Also on hand were King Mahendra and Queen Ratna of Nepal and Queen Mother Elizabeth of Belgium.

The news agency broadcast made no mention of Soviet delegates, though it had earlier reported six Russians headed by Vasily Prokhorov, secretary of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, were to attend.

Frances Moves Into Caribbean

SAN JUAN, P. R. (UPI) — Tropical storm Frances walloped into the eastern Caribbean Sea Sunday and a hurricane watch was ordered for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The storm, sixth of the season and the fifth to develop in September, passed over the southern Leeward Islands Saturday night, the center moving over the small island of Marie Galante.

Wind gusts of 50 to 60 miles an hour were reported on the island of Guadeloupe north of Marie Galante, but the Miami Weather Bureau said damage, if any, was believed to have been slight.

In an advisory at 6 p.m. EDT, the San Juan Weather Bureau said the storm was centered about 235 statute miles southeast of San Juan and 1,275 miles southeast of Miami.

Nehru Pleased As Sikh Leader Ends Long Fast

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Sikh leader Master Tara Singh Sunday night broke his 48-day fast—staged in a demand for a separate Sikh state. The 76-year-old religious leader consented to take some fruit juice.

Singh embarked on the fast Aug. 15 to bring pressure on the government to create a separate Punjab-speaking state for his Sikh people.

Earlier, Prime Minister Nehru had promised to appoint a commission to investigate the Sikh complaints—if Singh abandoned the fast.

Nehru told a national meeting on ways of increasing a sense of unity in India that it will take several weeks to name the commission, adding that he hopes by that time Singh "will have recovered fully to cooperate with the commission."

Algeria Uprising Denied

Radio dueling between the Syrians and Egyptians was marked by a roundabout report from Cairo of an uprising in Aleppo, the industrial center of the north, against Kuzbari's rebel regime.

This was promptly denied by Americans living in Aleppo. Reached by telephone from Beirut, they said there was no evidence of renewed fighting.

Cairo attributed its Aleppo story to an intercepted broadcast from an unidentified station. It reported heavy fighting was going on between the people, police and the army.

Radio Damascus countered with a declaration by the Syrian army command that reports from all Syrian districts showed security prevails and life has returned to normal. This was called proof that the people have full confidence in the revolution.

The conflicting reports of fighting and the fact that Syria's borders remained closed indicated, however, that the country still is in a state of tension. Foreign reporters were turned back at border points for the fourth straight day.

There also was a warning by the Syrian army command to "foreign destructive elements" to be quiet or face expulsion.

Syria To Deport Egyptians

Since all the several thousand Egyptians in Syria already were under orders to show up by Monday for deportation, this warning was aimed at other non-Syrian residents and refugees.

Communists have often tried to take a hand in Syrian affairs. Hundreds were rounded up after Syria joined Egypt under President Nasser in the United Arab Republic in 1958.

Without naming names, a Damascus communique reiterated that "foreign destructive elements" have been infiltrating and trying to distort demonstrations and rallies staged in support of the revolution. The revolution's aim, Kuzbari has said, is to give Syria's four million people a constitutionally stable democratic and Socialist life within four months.

Whatever the reason, the Education Ministry announced all schools and universities in Syria will be closed until further notice. Student organizations in the Middle East, as in Latin America, often are active politically.

Archbishop Dies Of Heart Attack

ROME (AP)—Archbishop William O. Brady, 62, of St. Paul, Minn., died early Sunday in a Rome hospital where he was under treatment for a heart condition.

Archbishop Brady suffered a heart attack Sept. 23 on a plane bringing him to Rome for meetings of Roman Catholic bishops and the Church Government Preparatory Committee for the forthcoming Ecumenical Council of the Church.

He was hospitalized at once but suffered three more attacks, the last Sunday morning. He died a short time later.

Cosmetic Users Warned By FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Users of cosmetics were advised by the Food and Drug Administration Sunday to beware of any cosmetics claimed to have "mysterious miracle ingredients."

"Cosmetics properly used can help greatly to improve one's appearance," the agency said in a newly revised consumer information booklet entitled "Read the Label."

"But don't fall for products that claim to 'restore youthful skin,' 'grow hair on bald heads,' or other far-fetched promises that appeal to natural desires to be young and attractive."

"The promoters are only interested in your money."

"Beware especially of cosmetics claimed to have some mysterious miracle ingredient, such as 'royal bee jelly,' 'turtle oil,' or something equally outlandish. The cosmetic label is not required to list the ingredients. When they are played up it's for promotional reasons."

"Generally speaking, cosmetics are made of safe materials and the law forbids any poisonous or harmful substances that may follow the normal user if he follows the directions on the label."

Supreme Court Will Open New Session Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court opens a new term Monday with its calendar already crowded with an all-time high of 1,050 cases touching on such major issues as reapportionment, racial discrimination and labor relations.

Chief Justice Earl Warren is expected to make a brief address during the opening ceremony, then the court will meet in closed conferences to consider appeals filed since it recessed for summer vacation June 19.

First arguments will be heard next Monday, involving the long-pending issue of whether federal courts have the right to order reapportioning of state legislative districts.

The case involved was appealed to the Supreme Court by a group of Tennessee voters who are asking that the federal judiciary compel Tennessee to redraw its legislative districts to end claimed discrimination against city electors.

The justices heard the first arguments on this appeal last April but did not reach a decision. They asked for reargument Oct. 9. Numerous states could be affected by the outcome. Many have state laws requiring periodic redistricting that has not been carried out.

Legal issues involving sit-in demonstrations in the South will come up in an appeal scheduled for hearing in the third week of the month.

Sixteen Negroes jailed for lunch counter sit-in demonstrations in Baton Rouge, La., carried their case to the Supreme Court.

The Negroes' attorneys say that if the convictions are allowed to stand such action would be "completely subversive of the numerous decisions throughout the federal judiciary outlawing state-enforced racial distinctions."

Two sit-in cases from Maryland, two from Virginia and three from North Carolina are awaiting Supreme Court decision on whether they will be heard.

Slot Machines In Cross Fire

BALTIMORE (AP)—Legalized gambling, particularly in the form of slot machines, came under cross fire over the weekend.

In Baltimore, federal court officials, who would not be named, said a full-scale grand jury investigation of racket activities in Maryland would start soon. The U. S. attorney for Maryland, Joseph D. Tydings, had unleashed a barrage Friday at slot machine interests in the state. Tydings said the slots exist only "at the sufferance of local political leaders," and promised he would soon start his own campaign to rid the state of gambling.

On another front, a gubernatorial hopeful, David Hume, said he knew quite a bit about illegal slot machine operations in the state and would be glad to supply his information to the grand jury studying the problem.

Del. John M. Whitmore, D-Anne Arundel, who seeks the Democratic nomination for a state senatorial seat now held by Louis N. Phipps, issued a statement in which he said he would not accept any campaign contributions from gambling sources.

'Copter Crash Fatal To Three Probed

WISE, N. C. (AP)—Military authorities are investigating the crash of a large helicopter near here Saturday, in which three Marines were killed.

A Marine Corps spokesman said the craft was on a training flight from Andrews Air Force Base, Md., when witnesses heard three explosions. The helicopter crashed on a farm near here not far from the Virginia state line.

The victims were First Lt. John W. Buckley, first pilot, whose wife and children live in Jacksonville, N. C., and whose father, Daniel F. Buckley, lives in Brentwood, Md.; First Lt. John E. Foliard, second pilot, whose wife and two children live in Jacksonville and whose mother, Mrs. Dionysa Foliard, lives in Bethesda, Md., and S. Sgt. William W. Brown, crew chief, of Texas.

Md. Bridge Asso. Will Accept Negroes

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Bridge Association has agreed to accept Negro members, a spokesman said this weekend.

The spokesman said that while there had never been an official club rule excluding Negro members from the club, there had been a policy of not accepting applications from Negroes. Under a new amendment to the club constitution, no one may be barred because of race. The vote favoring the amendment was passed 156-34.

Harvest Festival Service Held Near Berlin Barrier

BERLIN (AP)—Open air harvest festival services were held Sunday for the Church of Conciliation's Protestant community in Bernauerstrasse, where the walled border splits the street into East and West.

Most of the apartments on the East Berlin side of Bernauerstrasse have been evacuated by the Communists. A concrete wall, with broken glass cemented into the top of it, bars West Berlin members of the community from the red-brick church in East Berlin territory.

Of the 2,000 members of the Church of Conciliation, about 1,500 live in West Berlin, and the rest in East Berlin.

The church bells tolled as Dean Heinrich Grueber, a prominent Protestant clergyman, opened the services. About 600 West Berliners bowed their heads and prayed.

The altar, set up in a vacant lot 100 yards from the wall, was decorated with harvest products—sheaves of wheat, rye and barley, loaves of bread and flowers.

Traditionally, Germans celebrate the first Sunday of October as the day of the harvest festival. As the services went on, East Berlin workmen under guard of Communist police began to brick off second-floor windows of apartment houses in Bernauerstrasse.

The first-floor windows had been shut tight soon after the Communists realized that apartment houses facing the border were loopholes in their Iron Curtain.

Proxy Wedding Unites Couple

BALTIMORE (AP)—A pretty, 19-year-old Cuban girl who arrived here this weekend said she had used a proxy marriage to get permission to leave her country, but was really in love with her Baltimore husband.

Furthermore, she plans to marry him properly as soon as a church wedding can be arranged. In the meantime, they will live apart.

The proxy bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Martinez, held a reunion party Saturday at a Baltimore hotel used as the headquarters of an anti-Castro political group known as the Cuban Revolutionary Council.

"I will marry her, be sure of that," the 25-year-old groom said. Martinez said he moved to Baltimore from Havana in 1960 to avoid being drafted into Castro's militia. He was granted political asylum. The Martinez couple had known each other for three years, and had planned to marry in Cuba.

Mrs. Martinez was not permitted to come to the United States until last week, when papers of her proxy marriage were forwarded through the Czechoslovakian Embassy to Havana.

Boy Found Drowned At Construction Site

POCOMOKE CITY, Md. (AP)—John Stanford Williams, 15, of Pocomoke City, was found drowned at a flooded construction site here Saturday.

The body of the youth was found by a State Roads Commission inspector, and was identified later by his mother, who said he had been missing about five days.

Dr. M. E. Sartorius, Worcester County medical examiner, tentatively ruled the death an accidental drowning, but said an investigation was continuing.

Youth Killed, Seven Injured In 2-Car Crash

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A 16-year-old Newark, N. J. youth was killed and seven other persons were injured Saturday in a two-car collision near Elkton on U. S. 40.

The victim was identified as Joseph M. Balcavage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Balcavage. Both parents were injured, as well as two sisters. All three occupants of the other car also were injured.

In another Saturday accident, John Robert Monroe, 37, of Severna Park in Anne Arundel County died shortly after stepping out of a bus on Maryland Route 40 near his home.

State Police said Monroe either was struck or stepped into the side of the bus after getting out, and died immediately. The Anne Arundel County medical examiner's office said, however, that Monroe's body was not badly marked, and authorities ordered a more complete examination at the morgue.

Two soldiers stationed at Fort Ritchie, Md., died as the result of a Frederick County accident Friday night. The victims, Billy Ray Brackett of Visalia, Calif., and Joseph John Crawford of Philadelphia, both 20, were injured when their convertible overturned on Quirauc School Road near Frederick.

Brackett died shortly after the crash, and Crawford died Saturday at a hospital. Police said they had been driving at high speed.

In Montgomery County, Miss Roberta E. Jenkins, 43, of Silver Spring, was killed Friday night as she was walking along Maryland 650 near Coleville.

The weekend fatalities brought the Maryland highway death toll for the year to 316, compared with 399 at the same time last year.

U.S., Canada Plan Naval Exercises

SEATTLE (AP)—The Navy said Saturday a combined Canadian and United States force of 10,000 men and 150 ships, submarines and planes will take part in a naval exercise dubbed "Seashell" starting Oct. 2 off the North American Pacific Coast.

Seashell's purpose, the announcement said, is to strengthen Canadian-U. S. capability for anti-submarine warfare. The exercise will be over a two-week period.

The exact numbers of men and craft to be provided by each nation were not disclosed, but at least 27 United States ships and submarines and a large number of aircraft will be involved.

In overall charge of the operation, the Navy said, will be Vice Adm. J. S. Thatch, commander of the Anti-Submarine Warfare Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet. Canadian units will be in command of Rear Adm. E. W. Finch-Hoyes.

Maryland News In Brief

By The Associated Press
COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Dr. John R. Weske, University of Maryland professor of aeronautical engineering, has been appointed to a national advisory committee of the Institute of Aerospace Sciences.

The objective of the committee is to advise institute officers, council and staff on student activities of the institute and accreditation standards in aerospace engineering.

BALTIMORE (AP)—The first of six public discussions sponsored by the United Nations Association of Maryland will be held at the Baltimore Life Insurance Building Monday night.

Bentley Glass, professor of biology at Johns Hopkins University, will discuss his recent attendance at the Seventh International Conference on Science and World Affairs.

BALTIMORE (AP)—Maryland Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan refused Saturday to reverse his opinion that the state's insurance commissioner may legally hold their spouses.

The commissioner, F. Douglass Sears, has been under fire recently from Baltimore attorney Hyman Pressman. Pressman contends Sears had an interest in a New York insurance firm which is paying him a pension, thus making him ineligible for his present post.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—A request for a $4 million cyclotron by the University of Maryland is being studied by the Atomic Energy Commission, a commission spokesman said Saturday.

The machine, to be used in basic nuclear research, would cost about $3 million to build. The other $1 million requested would cover cost of a building to house the machine and related experimental equipment.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Marylanders were among the 44 persons named Saturday to start training for the second phase of the Peace Corps project in the Philippines.

Donna L. Monnier, 22, of Damascus and Nicholas N. Royal, 24, Ruxton, were among the 31 women and 13 men who were scheduled to begin their training Monday at Penn State University.

After introducing his wife for membership, Branden Warrenfelz, president of the Maryland Arborist Association, urged Saturday that other members sign up their spouses.

"They are our right hand men, so to speak," said Brandenfelz, whose wife became the group's first woman member. He made the suggestion during the association's second annual meeting here.

Twenty tree surgeons attended the session, which wound up with a dinner meeting.

Shepard Joins Navy's Heroes

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—A portrait of Alan B. Shepard Jr., America's first man in space, was presented to the U. S. Naval Academy Museum Saturday by his classmates from the class of 1945.

The portrait, painted by Bruce Stevenson of New York, was accepted for the Academy by Rear Adm. John F. Davidson, Academy superintendent. Cmdr. M. D. van Orden, 1945 class president, presented the painting.

Shepard, himself, was unable to attend the ceremonies. He was in Los Angeles for a meeting of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. His parents, Col. and Mrs. Alan B. Shepard of East Derry, N. H., were on hand for the presentation, however.

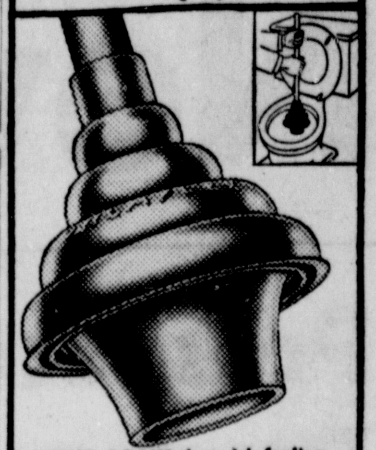

In accepting the portrait for the Academy, Adm. Davidson said he hoped it would "serve as an inspiration to Midshipmen and other Americans who see it."

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Re these "innocent young flowers" a mother wrote to you about a young daughter who had become emotionally involved with her college professor. The girl washed out of school because she was unable to keep her mind on studies.

The distressed mother claimed her daughter was an "innocent little flower" who knew nothing about sex when she left home. The father was furious. You advised the mother to inform the college authorities of the professor's behavior.

Are you some kind of a nut or something? I graduated from a good Eastern school in '59 and what is really needed is a Protective Society to keep some of

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In regard to that "innocent little flower" may I say a few words? My husband is a professor at a state university. He is handsome and youthful and dozens of co-eds have become infatuated with him. You simply can't envision the brazen techniques of pursuit employed by some of these "shy violets."

Girls have phoned at night "just to hear his voice." They drop in at our home to talk about "problems in the course." He avoids student-faculty functions because girls hang around him and drool shamelessly. If I were the jealous type (or insecure) I'd be out of my mind.

I never believed you to be naive, Ann, but I suspect the mother who was fooled by her daughter succeeded in fooling you. —PROFESSOR'S WIFE

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Now that you've printed the letter written by "Miss Innocent's" mother, may the mother of a college professor speak out?

My son is on the faculty of a well-known university. At 27 he earned his full professorship. During his second year of teaching, a disturbed 19-year-old imagined herself in love with him. The next thing he knew, the girl's father came down to school, armed with her letters recounting the "love affair." My son was called into the dean's office to answer the charges. He was stunned. He didn't even know the student's name.

It developed that the girl had been under psychiatric care and her story was the invention of a sick mind. Although my son was innocent he was the subject of ugly gossip for years.

You claim, Ann Landers, that you try to be fair. If you are fair, you will print my letter.

—A MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Here is your letter — and two more as well. Now then a professor has been known to hand out an A for Adultery. He should, of course be removed. Girls have—and always will—go ape over some professors, but a faculty member who hasn't the judgment or self-discipline to avoid romantic entanglements with students doesn't belong in the profession.

I advised the parents of "Innocent Flower" to notify the college in order to insure the professor a chance to face his accuser. No respectable school would dismiss a faculty member without allowing him a full opportunity to be heard.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Three Positions For Standing Charm

There is no doubt about it, the right makeup and clothes can change any woman's appearance for the better . . . except that of the woman who stands like a bumpkin.

Get you to a mirror. Critically analyze your own basic stance before you think about a new outfit. Is your back flat? Your abdomen retracted? Your shoulders relaxed? Your head held high? Your feet close together? Do your hands fall gracefully at your sides?

Remember, "one swallow maketh not a summer." Because you have mastered this one stance and can fall into it easily and beautifully is no reason for resting on your laurels. Learning to vary a correct stance is your next step and most important. Today I'll show you two ways that it can be done.

1. Make a light fist with your right hand. Place the plane formed by the fingers on your hip just behind the hip bone. Keep the wrist and elbow in a straight line, and hold the elbow in line with the shoulder to form a neat triangle. Let the left hand fall to your side and a little behind your skirt. When you view this position, you'll never again plunk both hands on your hips with the fingers spread-eagled!

2. Now try the next position. Place your feet about twelve inches apart and parallel to each other, with the toes pointed straight ahead. Any position of the arms will look fine with this pose except when your arms hang straight down at the sides. Look yourself over as you stand this way — will you ever again be caught with your toes pointing six ways to Sunday and your arms pointing to the fact?

Put in a little work on your posture. Then, when you improve your make-up or buy a new dress, it will really count!

Goren On Bridge

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:
 ♠A ♠K542 ♠973 ♠10654
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠
 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
 4 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A—Five diamonds. Partner obviously has a fine diamond suit for which our three small will be adequate support. On the other hand his clubs are only four in number and a bad break there might make five clubs an unplayable contract. An alternative call is four spades, but that might be a little drastic with such a weak holding in the minors.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
 ♠10643 ♠K10 ♠AKQ63 ♠75
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A—Five spades. Partner has shown a big hand with a solid spade suit. There should be a slam if the opponents are unable to grab a couple of quick tricks. Your leap over game will indicate to partner that he needs controls in the unbid suits.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
 ♠Q10963 ♠QJ63 ♠J953
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?
 A—Four spades. This bid serves a twofold purpose. Though partner could muster a mere overall, your hands could fit well enough to make the contract. Furthermore, should the hand belong to the opposition, your bid makes it extremely difficult for them to get together.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
 ♠AKJ ♠AJ1083 ♠2 ♠K984
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠
 Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A—Two clubs. The temptation is to raise spades immediately. However, a single raise would be inadequate, and a double raise should be avoided when holding only three trumps, even such good ones as these. The compromise choice is a temporizing bid of two clubs intending to raise spades subsequently.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
 ♠QJ107654 ♠J82 ♠Q63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ ?

What do you bid?
 A—Four hearts. Your hand has great playing strength but virtually no defense, so every effort should be exerted to prevent the opponents from getting together. This is the same response you would have made if East had not entered the auction.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
 ♠AKJ10753 ♠A862 ♠7 ♠A5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass Pass
 2 ♠ 3 ♠ 3 ♠ 4 ♠
 4 ♠ 5 ♠ Double Pass

What do you bid now?
 A—Five hearts. This hand will be a disappointment defensively, but if your partner has merely five hearts to the king-queen, you will be an outstanding favorite to make five hearts.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
 ♠AQ63 ♠4 ♠J3 ♠109865
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A—Pass. You have told your story. If partner had a fit with either of your suits or if he did not have hearts adequately controlled, he would not have persisted with no trump.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
 ♠J6 ♠93 ♠AQ108642 ♠85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 Pass 1 NT Double ?

What do you bid?
 A—Three no trump. This may seem a bit unusual, but your hand is a reasonable prospect to produce seven tricks which your partner will certainly be able to fill out to nine. Furthermore, it is possible the opponents will have a good save in one of the major suits against which this bid may serve as an effective barricade.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — Sammy in "Houseboat," in which he played the role of a young man who has been packing Grant and Sophia Loren. I've watched him ever since, and I've never seen him give a dull performance.

Hold everything! Sammy is going to Folsom to co-star with Ben Gazzara and Ray Walston in "Reprieve" for Allied Artists. He's staying in London long enough, however, to do a command performance—his second.

The story of "Reprieve" which will be entirely shot against the prison's background is the true one of John Resko, who was sentenced for murder, later reprieved, and who became a great artist. Sammy plays a tough, tough convict who is rehabilitated when Resko (Gazzara) teaches him to read, by way of the Bible.

The movie starts November 6th, with Ronald Lubin and Leonard Millard Kaufman at the helm.

It's Hayley Mills who will co-star with Joanne Woodward in "Chalk Garden," which is an amazing change of pace for this talented fifteen-year-old comedienne.

The highly dramatic role becomes Hayley's because Ross Hunter must start the film early in January, and Sandra Dee, originally slated for the part, will still be anticipating the first heir of the De-Darin estate at that time.

Ross leaves over the weekend for New York and the East to ballyhoo "Back Street," and Hayley, the most talented child actress since Shirley Temple, is finishing up a picture in England.

Leticia Roman, who is one of the most beautiful girls to hit Hollywood in a long time, won't be returning here for several more months. After finishing "Pontius Pilate" in Rome, the dark-eyed Leticia goes to Belgrade to co-star with Mel Ferrer in "The Black Lancers."

She'll be up against some stiff acting competition because Yvonne Fureaux, who was so touching as the discarded mistress in "La Dolce Vita," also is in the "The Black Lancers."

Meanwhile I hear that Joe Mantel's son, Tom, a student at Yale, isn't a bit happy about Leticia being absent from this country so long.

Chatted with Russell Nype, first at the Kay Gable cocktail party and later at the Quo Vadis Restaurant—and we had a long talk. He tells me he plays the husband of Glynis Johns in "The Chapman Report." He said he had to get an okay from M-G-M to make this picture, because he sold them a TV series idea, and is under contract to them.

Russell loves California, and wants to move his wife and three children here.

He made his debut on Broadway in "Call Me Madam," is the only actor to receive two "Tony" awards—the stage equivalent for our "Oscar."

I first made the motion picture acquaintance of Harry Guardino

the Hollywood Brown Derby attracted much interest. Loreta Young was with her mother, Mrs. Gladys Beltzer, her daughter Judy (Mrs. Joe) Tinney, and Judy's little girl.

Kay Gable's interesting book "Clark Gable, Personal Portrait," got off to a fine start with a cocktail party given by Ann Miller and Arthur Cameron at his attractive home.

The newspaper fraternity was well represented as well as Kay's many friends. Sheila Graham showed me with great pride, an article her son Robert had written from Russia, which was published in the U. S. Nothing Sheila ever wrote herself, has made her a happy.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently a mother wrote to you about a young daughter who had become emotionally involved with her college professor. The girl washed out of school because she was unable to keep her mind on studies.

The distressed mother claimed her daughter was an "innocent little flower" who knew nothing about sex when she left home. The father was furious. You advised the mother to inform the college authorities of the professor's behavior.

Are you some kind of a nut or something? I graduated from a good Eastern school in '59 and what is really needed is a Protective Society to keep some of these "innocent young flowers" off the professor's necks. Naturally, some of the professors buckle. They aren't made of stone, you know. But do you feel it is fair to jeopardize a man's livelihood just because he took what was offered? I am terribly disappointed in you.—WIZAPPLE

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In regard to that "innocent little flower" may I say a few words? My husband is a professor at a state university. He is handsome and youthful and dozens of co-eds have become infatuated with him. You simply can't envision the brazen techniques of pursuit employed by some of these "shy violets."

Girls have phoned at night "just to hear his voice." They drop in at our home to talk about "problems in the course." He avoids student-faculty functions because girls hang around him and drool shamelessly. If I were the jealous type (or insecure) I'd be out of my mind.

I never believed you to be naive, Ann, but I suspect the mother who was fooled by her daughter succeeded in fooling you.—PROFESSOR'S WIFE

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Now that you've printed the letter written by "Miss Innocent's" mother, may the mother of a college professor speak out?

My son is on the faculty of a well-known university. At 27 he earned his full professorship. During his second year of teaching, a disturbed 19-year-old imagined herself in love with him. The next thing he knew, the girl's father came down to school, armed with her letters recounting the "love affair." My son was called into the dean's office to answer the charges. He was stunned. He didn't even know the student's name.

It developed that the girl had been under psychiatric care and her story was the invention of a sick mind. Although my son was innocent he was the subject of ugly gossip for years.

You claim, Ann Landers, that you try to be fair. If you are fair, you will print my letter.

—A MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Here is your letter — and two more as well. Now then a professor has been known to hand out an A for Adultery. He should, of course be removed. Girls have—and always will—go ape over some professors, but a faculty member who hasn't the judgment or self-discipline to avoid romantic entanglements with students doesn't belong in the profession.

I advised the parents of "Innocent Flower" to notify the college in order to insure the professor a chance to face his accuser. No respectable school would dismiss a faculty member without allowing him a full opportunity to be heard.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Three Positions For Standing Charm

There is no doubt about it, the right makeup and clothes can change any woman's appearance for the better . . . except that of the woman who stands like a bumpkin.

Get you to a mirror. Critically analyze your own basic stance before you think about a new outfit. Is your back flat? Your abdomen retracted? Your shoulders relaxed? Your head held high? Your feet close together? Do your hands fall gracefully at your sides?

Remember, "one swallow maketh not a summer." Because you have mastered this one stance and can fall into it easily and beautifully is no reason for resting on your laurels. Learning to vary a correct stance is your next step and most important. Today I'll show you two ways that it can be done.

1. Make a light fist with your right hand. Place the plane formed by the fingers on your hip just behind the hip bone. Keep the wrist and elbow in a straight line, and hold the elbow in line with the shoulder to form a neat triangle. Let the left hand fall to your side and a little behind your skirt. When you view this position, you'll never again plunk both hands on your hips with the fingers spread-eagled!

2. Now try the next position. Place your feet about twelve inches apart and parallel to each other, with the toes pointed straight ahead. Any position of the arms will look fine with this pose except when your arms hang straight down at the sides. Look yourself over as you stand this way — will you ever again be caught with your toes pointing six ways to Sunday and your arms pointing to the fact?

Put in a little work on your posture. Then, when you improve your make-up or buy a new dress, it will really count!

Coren On Bridge

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠A ♠K542 ♠973 ♠10654

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1♦ 1♠ 2♥ 2♠

3♦ Pass 4♠ Pass

4♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A—Five diamonds. Partner obviously has a fine diamond suit for which our three small will be adequate support. On the other hand his clubs are only four in number and a bad break there might make five clubs an unplayable contract. An alternative call is four spades, but that might be a little drastic with such a weak holding in the minors.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠10643 ♠K10 ♠AKQ63 ♠75

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1♠ 1♠ 2♠ 2♠

3♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A—Five spades. Partner has shown a big hand with a solid spade suit. There should be a slam if the opponents are unable to grab a couple of quick tricks. Your leap over game will indicate to partner that he needs controls in the unbid suits.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠AQ10963 ♠QJ63 ♠J953

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1♠ 1♠ 2♠ 2♠

3♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?

A—Four spades. This bid serves a twofold purpose. Though partner could muster a mere overcall, your hands could fit well enough to make the contract. Furthermore, should the hand belong to the opposition, your bid makes it extremely difficult for them to get together.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠AKJ ♠AJ1083 ♠2 ♠K984

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

Pass 1♥ Pass 1♠

Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A—Two clubs. The temptation is to raise spades immediately. However, a single raise would be inadequate, and a double raise should be avoided when holding only three trumps, even such good ones as these. The compromise choice is a teasing bid of two clubs intending to raise spades subsequently.

Q. 5—As South you hold:

♠QJ107654 ♠J82 ♠A063

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South

1♠ 2♦ 2♠

What do you bid?

A—Four hearts. Your hand has great playing strength but virtually no defense, so every effort should be exerted to prevent the opponents from getting together. This is the same response you would have made if East had not entered the auction.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠AKJ10753 ♠A862 ♠7 ♠A

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1♠ 2♦ 2♠ 2♠

2♥ 3♦ 3♥ 4♦

4♥ 5♦ Double Pass

What do you bid now?

A—Five hearts. This hand will be a disappointment, but if your partner has merely five hearts to the king-queen, you will be an outstanding favorite to make five hearts.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠AQ863 ♠A ♠J3 ♠109865

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1♦ 1♠ 1♠ 1♠

2NT Pass 3♠ Pass

3NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A—Pass. You have told your story. If partner had a fit with either of your suits or if he did not have hearts adequately controlled, he would not have persisted with no trump.

Q. 8—As South you hold:

♠J6 ♠93 ♠AQ108642 ♠A85

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

Pass 1NT Double ?

What do you bid?

A—Three no trump. This may seem a bit unusual, but your hand is a reasonable prospect to produce seven tricks which your partner will certainly be able to fill out to nine. Furthermore, it is possible the opponents will have a good save in one of the major suits against which this bid may serve as an effective barricade.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — Sammy Davis Jr., who has been packing them in for weeks at the Prince of Wales Theatre in London, is coming back to Folsom Prison.

Hold everything! Sammy is going to Folsom to co-star with Ben Gazzara and Ray Walston in "Reprieve" for Allied Artists. He's staying in London long enough, however, to do a command performance—his second.

The story of "Reprieve" which will be entirely shot against the prison's background is the true story of John Resko, who was sentenced for murder, later reprieved, and who became a great artist. Sammy plays a tough, tough convict who is rehabilitated when Resko (Gazzara) teaches him to read, by way of the Bible.

The movie starts November 6th, with Ronald Lubin and Leonard Millard Kaufman at the helm.

It's Hayley Mills who will co-star with Joanne Woodward in "Chalk Garden," which is an amazing change of pace for this talented fifteen-year-old comedienne.

The highly dramatic role becomes Hayley's because Ross Hunter must start the film early in January, and Sandra Dee, originally slated for the part, will still be anticipating the first heir of the Dee-Darin estate at that time.

Ross leaves over the weekend for New York and the East to ballyhoo "Back Street," and Hayley, the most talented child actress since Shirley Temple, is finishing up a picture in England.

Leticia Roman, who is one of the most beautiful girls to hit Hollywood in a long time, won't be returning here for several more months. After finishing "Pontius Pilate" in Rome, the dark-eyed Leticia goes to Belgrade to co-star with Mel Ferrer in "The Black Lancers."

She'll be up against some stiff acting competition because Yvonne Fureaux, who was so touching as the discarded mistress in "La Dolce Vita," also is in "The Black Lancers."

Meanwhile I hear that Joe Maniewicz's son, Tom, a student at Yale, isn't a bit happy about Leticia being absent from this country so long.

Chatted with Russell Nye, first at the Kay Gable cocktail party and later at the Quo Vadis Restaurant—and we had a long talk. He tells me he plays the husband of Glynis Johns in "The Chapman Report." He said he had to get an okay from M-G-M to make this picture, because he sold them a TV series idea, and is under contract to them.

Russell loves California, and wants to move his wife and three children here.

He made his debut on Broadway in "Call Me Madam," is the only actor to receive two "Tony" awards—the stage equivalent for our "Oscar."

I first made the motion picture acquaintance of Harry Guardino

in "Houseboat," in which he almost stole the show from Cary Grant and Sophia Loren. I've watched him ever since, and I've never seen him give a dull performance.

He telephoned to say au revoir a few days ago, because he's off for Rome, where he'll join Charlton Heston in "Easter Dinner," a comedy Mel Shavelson is producing for Paramount. It was Mel who discovered Harry, and put him in "Houseboat."

After Harry finishes "Easter Dinner," he'll stop off in New York, to talk to David Merrick about his new Broadway musical, "I Can Get It For You Whole-sale."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Sam Briskin, who worked too hard as head of Columbia, has been hospitalized with a bad virus at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. He'll be out over the weekend to welcome Sol Schwartz, his successor, who takes over officially on Monday. Sol is very capable, congenial, and popular. I'm glad my old friend Sam will take it easier.

The reconciliation between the Michael Callans worked out so happily they cut their European vacation short to be with their infant daughter Dawn.

A four generation luncheon at the Hollywood Brown Derby attracted much interest. Loretta Young was with her mother, Mrs. Gladys Belter, her daughter Judy (Mrs. Joe) Tinney, and Judy's little girl.

Kay Gable's interesting book "Clark Gable, Personal Portrait," got off to a fine start with a cocktail party given by Ann Miller and Arthur Cameron at his attractive home.

The newspaper fraternity was well represented as well as Kay's many friends. Sheila Graham showed me with great pride, an article her son Robert had written from Russia, which was published in the U. S. Nothing Sheila ever wrote herself, has made her as happy.

Pa. Forester Will Speak Near Hancock

Tree Farm Awards To Be Presented

HANCOCK—Ralph C. Wible, a career conservationist who rose from the ranks to become Pennsylvania state forester, will be the principal speaker at ceremonies near Hancock honoring forest landowners from three states on Thursday, October 19.

Mr. Wible, who has been with the Department of Forests and Waters for more than 30 years, will speak on "Trees and the Tri-State economy" at the second annual Tri-State Forestry Field Day on the A. B. Ruppenthal Tree Farm in Fulton County, Pa., near Hancock.

The field day, sponsored by the Tree Farms Committees of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia and the Hancock Bank, will feature presentations of signs and certificates of membership in the American Tree Farm System and prizes in the Hancock Bank's annual tree planting contest.

There also will be contests of logging skills, forestry demonstrations and tours of the host tree farm to see the results of good forest management.

Chairmen of the tree farm committees of the three states will present the tree farm awards. The Maryland chairman is David W. Sowers, Jr., of Hancock. Brooks Smith, cashier of the bank, will present tree planting contest prizes. Conway Robinson, farm editor of a Baltimore radio and TV station, will be master of ceremonies.

The Tri-State Forestry Field Day will help note the 20th anniversary year of the American tree farm system. The nationwide program to encourage the voluntary practice of good forestry on privately owned woodlands was begun on the West Coast on a single tract in June, 1941. Sponsored by American Forest Products Industries, Inc., of Washington, D. C., the program is now active in 47 states and has on its membership rolls more than 21,000 tree farms covering over 56 million acres of managed timberland growing wood for America's needs.

The state program, sponsored by the Maryland Forest Industries Committee with the cooperation of the Department of Forests and Parks, District Conservancy Boards and the Agricultural Extension Service, was begun in 1948. There are 30 tree farms in the state comprising 20,329 acres.

Mr. Wible entered state forestry service in 1927 upon his graduation from the School of Forestry of Pennsylvania State University. He served successively as junior forester, assistant district forester and district forester before being named deputy secretary of forests and waters (state forester) in 1952.

Now vice-president of the Association of State Foresters, he will become president of that nationwide group next year. Other posts he has held include chairman of the Allegheny Section, Society of American Foresters; secretary of the Pennsylvania Forestry Assn. and member of the Pennsylvania Tree Farm Committee.

The Hard Way Of The Peacemaker

Blessed as the peacemakers may be — "They shall be called the children of God" — their way on earth is not an easy one.

Witness the trek of the 30 militant pacifists who left San Francisco last December 1, passing through Maryland on a march to Moscow, there to hand out pamphlets and to stage street meetings agitating for nuclear disarmament. Originally they were given six weeks to cross the Soviet Union, but their time later was cut in half without explanation, so that they now must reach Moscow by tomorrow. Permission to enter the Soviet Union was negotiated through the Soviet Peace Committee, members of which are accompanying the marchers.

Less sure of a reception committee is Earle L. Reynolds, American anthropologist professor and pacifist who sailed from Hiroshima last Sunday with his wife and family and a California friend, bound for Vladivostok to protest Russian resumption of nuclear tests. The Russians refused him a visa.

Non-violence is a social action technique of relatively recent development which has proved highly effective when efficiently organized — even though there is no record of its ever having influenced arms control or having achieved other pacifist aims. The Quakers' traditional peace testimony, which rests not only on negative war resistance but also on active promotion of reconciliation at all times, has had little outward success. Perhaps the most notable failure of a private effort at peacemaking was that of the mission aboard Henry Ford's Peace Ship, which sailed in December 1915 to Scandinavia. The hope was that neutral governments might be induced to propose an armistice to the World War I belligerents. The movement met with sneers and jests in the United States and with general indifference in Europe.

Certainly one reason that the way of the peacemaker is hard is that the man in the crowd is inclined to suspect the practiced diplomat, at the same time — unfortunately — mocking self-appointed demonstrators or conciliators as crackpots.

Policy Must Be Reviewed

President Kennedy's speech before the United Nations General Assembly left the impression that the United States was not bound to principle, that it took a pragmatic, man-of-the-street practical view of the problems that face us. This impression is more due to language than to substance.

Our basic principle is freedom and as regards that we make no compromises whatsoever. It is necessary therefore to review the nature and trend of our foreign policy. The President had to adopt much of the Eisenhower policy because there must be some continuity. His own operations inside and outside the State Department are too complex for effective results. There are too many prima donnas, too many cordon bleu cooks; in simple English, too many stars playing the same role.

The time has come to check this and to get some of the brilliant talents who have concentrated in the realm of foreign affairs to function cooperatively without competition. Some of those who seemed so promising at the beginning of the Kennedy Administration are no longer very important.

One of the weaknesses of the hydra-headed State Department is that each man of talent pulls his own way and supports his own particular favorites among the great men of the world. For instance, Sukarno of Indonesia seems to be a favorite but without much justification. The Soviet "New Times" as recently as June 14, 1961 had an article entitled, "Our friend Sukarno." It is a warm article and it opens on a sweet note.

"When I decided to make a fourth round-the-world trip, I was aware that I would be spending by birthday, June 6, abroad. I therefore planned my itinerary in such a way as to be in the Soviet Union on that day. I did so because on my birthday I wanted to be in a country where I would feel at home, just as if I were among my own family."

Now, this Sukarno is supposed to be a neutral. He is supposed to be non-aligned. However, in this article he is "at home" in Soviet Russia, "just as if I were among my own family."

Sukarno never said in a speech that he felt at home in the United States. His neutrality does not go that far. He only comes to our country to get aid, a handout, or tell our President to make his own peace with Khrushchev on Khrushchev's terms.

Our policy ought to be that no aid should go to such as Sukarno, Tito, Castro, Nkrumah, directly or indirectly. Our policy ought to be that those who are not for us are against us, that a neutral is one who is just as much in favor of us as of Soviet Russia. Sukarno said at the Kremlin dinner:

"We have come to the conclusion that the progress of newly-liberated countries is being impeded by capitalism, colonialism and imperialism. We, that is, the Afro-Asian nations, have to contend with many difficulties, and we carefully study the attitude of other countries toward us. Our eyes are turned, first and foremost, to the Soviet Union because we know that it wants freedom for all nations that have proclaimed independence."

When a man who deliberately uttered this historic lie visited the White House to instruct the President on how he should conduct himself, he should have been told, by the porter, to go home and tend to his own Red knitting. Let him sit on Khrushchev's knee!

The President of the United States is alone responsible for the conduct of foreign policy. He alone must go before the voters to defend his course. Neither the Secretary of State nor the Under-Secretary of State, nor the Ambassador to the United Nations holds a position of equal responsibility.

He must therefore reorganize and simplify the formulation and conduct of our foreign policy. This needs to be done immediately because what with Chester Bowles arranging his own East Asian policy and "Soapy" Williams running all over Africa making promises which neither he nor the President can carry forward, we shall find ourselves in increasing difficulties.

Admitting that Adlai Stevenson is doing remarkably well in the United Nations, a difficulty arises because of Stevenson's prominence and significance. The assumption is too general that it is Adlai Stevenson and not the President or the Secretary of State who determines the foreign policy of the United States. This must be corrected if the President is to maintain his position.

'Why Worry About A Few Little Bites?'

New CIA Head Is An Able, Hard-boiled Man

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON The choice of John A. McCone to succeed Allen W. Dulles as director of the Central Intelligence Agency is a notable event, in several more ways than immediately meet the eye.

More importantly, this hard-boiled choice of an able, hard-boiled man to head the CIA gives an interesting indication of the development of the President's ideas about foreign policy-making during the storm-tossed and difficult months since he took office.

At the Inauguration, as now, there was an easily discernible division at the very heart of the Kennedy administration, between the hard-boiled and soft-boiled thinkers about world affairs. With Adlai E. Stevenson and Under-Secretary of State Chester Bowles at their head and many lesser adherents among the New Frontiersmen, the soft-boiled group enjoyed great prominence, and at first looked as though they might acquire great influence.

The contest of viewpoint was all the more interesting because it was not absolutely clear, at the outset, which viewpoint would finally be adopted by the President and Secretary of State Dean Rusk. After the Cuban failure, moreover, the CIA became the target of intense attack by the soft-boiled faction and their fairly numerous supporters outside the government.

This was natural, for the CIA necessarily sums up and symbolizes everything that the soft-boiled thinkers most detest. Their basic view is that it is immoral, illiberal, and un-American to tell the cold war as a true war in all respects but the intermittent absence of shooting. The CIA's basic purpose is to prosecute the cold war in a serious manner.

The actual suppression of the CIA was therefore rather loudly suggested in the bitter aftermath of the abortive Cuban enterprise. It was further indicated that if the CIA was not to be suppressed, then the wounded feelings of the pure in heart must be soothed by the choice of someone with virtuously soft-boiled tendencies as Adlai Dulles's successor.

The President has now rejected this advice, although it was pressed upon him with great vigor and volubility both in public and in private. To make the event more interesting, the rejection has taken place in stages.

In the first stage, a neutral appointee, not displeasing to either the hard-boiled or the soft-boiled thinkers, was sought. But the man considered at this stage, the new head of the foreign aid program, Fowler Hamilton, placed limits on the time he could serve, and there were other difficulties. The President's thought then began to move toward an unconcealed hard-boiled choice. The final result was the offer of the CIA directorship to John McCone.

Even before the appointment was announced, the protests began coming into the White House from university and other groups where soft-boiled ideas are most prevalent. As is usual in such cases, every issue but the central issue has been raised by McCone's attackers.

In other words, none of those protesting the appointment have said, straight out, "We don't want this man because he takes a hard-boiled view of Soviet purposes and of the cold war." But this was, of course, the real objection; for McCone's record of public service under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower speaks for itself.

When President Eisenhower first took office, McCone was proposed for the Secretaryship of the Air Force. But the new Secretary of Defense of those days, the late Charles E. Wilson, told McCone that he could not have the job because he was "tainted with Trumanism." Secretary Wilson also objected to anyone who took the cold war too seriously, because of the inevitable effects on the national budget. And this was what he really meant by "tainted with Trumanism."

In truth, a shared prejudice, though a prejudice shared for widely different reasons, quite directly links the Wilson veto on the McCone appointment in 1953 and the present protest against the new McCone appointment.

But events of recent months have grimly underlined the folly of this prejudice against taking the cold war too seriously. On the right, it results in budget-limited defense programs. On the left, it results in fond, delusive hopes that the cold war can be comfortably transformed into a wordy "battle for the uncommitted nations." But the cold war remorselessly continues, and if it is not taken seriously, it will be lost, and the cause of freedom will also be lost.

He hopes to enlarge the menu with "state specialties." "I'd like to feature them two or three days a week, and we have 50 states to choose from, so that's a way to get a great deal of variety in the menu."

Sonnag promises to retain bean soup on the menu daily. According to restaurant records, it's been there since 1907, when the Senate Rules Committee adopted a motion ordering it as a permanent fixture.

For the last 14 years, the Senate restaurant has been operated under lease to a private concessionaire. It has now been returned to the direct control of the Senate under the supervision of the architect of the Capitol. Employees have been transferred from the private payroll to that of the government.

Investigation Into Hammarskjold's Death Reveals Tragedy Of Errors

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—Official investigation into the death of Dag Hammarskjold is now about complete and reveals a tragedy of possible errors plus a scandalous harassing of civilian airports by a white Belgian pilot thus forcing the UN Secretary General to fly at night.

One error may have been a faulty altimeter. There are indications that the altimeter was 2,000 feet off, substantiating this was the fact that tops of the trees had been sheared off as the plane approached for a landing.

The other factor may have been pilot fatigue. Eric Hallonquist, Hammarskjold's pilot, had been flying for 36 straight hours almost without any sleep before the tragedy. He had been doing extra duty because the Belgian mercenary hired by President Tshombe had so terrorized other local pilots that they would not fly.

The third error was the fact that the airport tower operator at Ndola, in Northern Rhodesia, had contacted the Hammarskjold plane about ten miles from the airport. However, when it failed to land he simply closed the airport and went to bed.

Had he investigated and located the crash, it is quite possible that some of the passengers could have been saved. Instead they lay on the ground for nine hours.

However, the overall factor which caused the tragedy was President Tshombe's purchase of three jet fighter-trainer planes and his hiring of the Belgian Mercenary, Van Reisseghem, sometimes flying with co-pilot Lieutenant Deulin, who systematically strafed and bombed the airports at Kamina and Elizabethville. He was so ruthless in his attacks that no other professional pilot in the area would fly. Thus Hammarskjold was forced to fly at night.

Even then, he flew without radio beam and with fifteen different airports alerted, so that Tshombe's jet fighters would not know where to lay in wait for him.

These were factors behind the death of Dag Hammarskjold.

Faulty News Coverage The New York Times has been pressuring the Associated Press regarding its coverage of the Congo. Exaggerated AP accounts of casualties suffered by UN troops got the people of Ireland and Sweden terribly upset, though in the end there were only twelve casualties.

On top of this the AP distributed a story that Hammarskjold had arrived in Ndola, Northern Rhodesia, and was already conferring with President Tshombe. This was at the very time when Hammarskjold was dead.

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and President Moshe Tshombe met for more than an hour here tonight to discuss a ceasefire," the AP reported. "The two then drove to Kitwe, 30 miles northwest of Ndola," continued the AP in considerable detail.

The Times published this on Page 1 on the morning of September 18. That afternoon newspapers were featuring the fact that Hammarskjold was killed before he reached Tshombe.

The Congressman from Harlem Adam Clayton Powell, the Congressman from Harlem, N. Y., who used to complain about the dictatorial tactics of his predecessor, Graham Barden of North Carolina, is getting dictatorial himself.

The Negro Congressman spent the closing days of Congress in Europe and won't be back until late October. He usually takes a trip abroad at this time at the taxpayers expense.

But he has sent word that the No. 1 Republican on his House Education and Labor Committee must give up Room 428 in the Old House Office Building by October 2—today.

Room 428 is now occupied by four of Kennedy's aides, Melvin Sneed, Jr., Richard T. Burrell, Miss Jeanne Thomson, and Mrs. Beverly A. Pearson (no relation to this writer). Chairman Powell wants to move them out for some Democratic staff members and has served an ultimatum that if they don't move their salaries will be terminated.

Under the dictatorial precedents which have grown up in the House of Representatives whereby a committee chairman is all-powerful, he can probably do this. It will be interesting to see what happens.

Behind The Scenes Chancellor Adenauer now blames Vice President Lyndon Johnson for almost losing the West German elections. Adenauer complained bitterly to friends that Johnson should have taken him along on his mission to Berlin. This would have been worth enough votes Adenauer contended, to win him a decisive victory.

The nation's newest best seller is a civilian defense pamphlet called "The Family Fall-out Shelter." Americans have deluged Washington with nearly 7,000,000 requests for this pamphlet since Russia began testing nuclear bombs a month ago. President Kennedy has notified Congressional leaders privately to be ready to hurry back to Washington for a special emergency session—if the Berlin crisis grows worse.

The fine back-stage work of Attorney General Robert Kennedy was largely responsible for smooth school integration in Atlanta, Dallas, and others southern communities. Even Little Rock accepted integration this fall without incident. Kennedy had been on the phone privately to southern leaders urging them to exercise wisdom and restraint. He also called upon Negro leaders not to stir up unnecessary trouble.

Adlai Stevenson has privately sounded out B. K. Nehru, the able Indian Ambassador to Washington, and a cousin of Prime Minister Nehru, as a possible successor to Hammarskjold.

President Kennedy has ordered his foreign aid supervisors to take a second, searching look at projects for neutral nations which seem to favor Russia over the United States. Kennedy doesn't want to cut back on aid for India or the African nations. He is even willing to go ahead with developing the Volta River in Ghana, despite its pro-Soviet attitude. But future projects for Poland and Yugoslavia may be cancelled.

President Kennedy has sent word to Premier Khrushchev that he sees no purpose in negotiating over Berlin if the Communists intend to renew their aggression in Laos. In Vienna Khrushchev assured Kennedy that he wanted peace in Laos. Now the Reds are preparing to resume the attack as soon as the monsoon rains let up.

A group of us were sitting around the living room bar talking about books and I said I didn't like prefaces. Most of them are dull and pretentious. The poorer the book, the more pontifical the preface. The last good one I read was in 1934. It was penned by Mark Hellinger, for his book "The Ten Million."

The book consisted of a group of O. Henry style stories. Mr. Hellinger had little hope for it, other than the prestige of getting his name on it. Eventually, he lost money on the deal because he gave more copies away than were sold.

He was the husband of Gladys Glad, whom Florenz Ziegfeld called the most "cautious woman in the world, a woman who still has a lot of it left. They lived with a lovely German maid named Vera Winkler in an apartment at 180 E. 78th St., New York, a 35-cent cab ride from Billy L. Hiff's Tavern.

Hellinger, a Broadway columnist, finished the book and wrote the most disarming of all prefaces:

"As I write these lines, I am thirty-one years of age. And what have I accomplished? Very little. What can I hope to accomplish? Still less. Do I write well? At my best, only fairly. Why, then is this book being published? God knows."

He told how he became a Broadway columnist. "I was important now. I was a Broadway columnist. But they weren't kidding me, brothers and sisters. I knew I was no genius and that there were two hundred rewrite men in New York alone who could turn out better copy. But there I was, the one mug who got the break."

"So, liking the racket—which is just what it is—I kept writing. And here I am today, punching out a column that is syndicated from coast to coast and read daily by several million people who enjoy seeing the English language mangled."

"Thus, for a punk who deserves far less, I've had a rather interesting thirty-one years. Instead of a bank account, I can point to the following: I've been all over this silly world of ours. . . I'm married to the beautiful lady who, before our marriage was known as Gladys Glad. She is now known as Gladys Glad."

"I have written several motion pictures, a book called Moon Over Broadway, numerous magazine articles, a musical comedy named Hot Cat, and the last Folies that Flo Ziegfeld produced. For further information, send a self-addressed envelope and ten cents in stamps."

"I have but one mission in life, and it is not to write for posterity. I want merely to earn enough to buy brandy 'or my friends, to give a little to the poor, enough to take me where I wish to go, and to die in peace.

"You'll find sixty-four stories in this book. About six of them are excellent. Perhaps ten others are fairly good. The rest—well, you'll find out. It may be that you'll find a tear in just one. Or a snicker. Or a genuine laugh. If you do, I will feel amply repaid. I've read many a book—and by far better authors—that couldn't do as much for me."

It amounts to a clever piece of underselling. It kides the writer and the reader. Hellinger's acknowledgements, or thank yous, were also written glibly:

"Mr. Hellinger, as I always refer to myself in public, hereby offers his thanks to the following: "To King Features Syndicate, for permitting him to republish much of the material in this book. To O. Henry and Guy de Maupassant, for the same reason."

"To the Underwood Typewriter Company, for creating machines which can be operated with one finger. To Saks, for underwear that does not bind while seated at the typewriter. To the Altham Pharmacy, for delivering aspirin, alanol, cigarettes, Bromo Seltzer and Dr. Hinkle's Pink Pills at ten per cent off the list price."

"To the lady in the apartment upstairs, for stopping her tap dancing at 4 every morning while this book was being written. To my wife, for permitting me to work, and for going out to the movies three times a week alone, I hope."

"The Ten Million" did not do well. Years later, Mr. Hellinger became a producer of motion pictures in Hollywood. He told one of his bosses that he had written books. The boss did not believe him. Hellinger combed all the second-hand book dealers looking for a copy of "The Ten Million."

When at last, he found one, the bookseller asked $25 for it. Hellinger blew up. "A new copy only costs $2.50," he hollered. "Why $25?" The clerk flipped open the fly leaf. "This one," he said smugly, "is autographed."

The Hard Way Of The Peacemaker

Blessed as the peacemakers may be — "They shall be called the children of God" — their way on earth is not an easy one.

Witness the trek of the 30 militant pacifists who left San Francisco last December 1, passing through Maryland on a march to Moscow, there to hand out pamphlets and to stage street meetings agitating for nuclear disarmament. Originally they were given six weeks to cross the Soviet Union, but their time later was cut in half without explanation, so that they now must reach Moscow by tomorrow. Permission to enter the Soviet Union was negotiated through the Soviet Peace Committee, members of which are accompanying the marchers.

Less sure of a reception committee is Earle L. Reynolds, American anthropology professor and pacifist who sailed from Hiroshima last Sunday with his wife and family and a California friend, bound for Vladivostok to protest Russian resumption of nuclear tests. The Russians refused him a visa.

Non-violence is a social action technique of relatively recent development which has proved highly effective when efficiently organized — even though there is no record of its ever having influenced arms control or having achieved other pacifist aims. The Quakers' traditional peace testimony, which rests not only on negative war resistance but also on active promotion of reconciliation at all times, has had little outward success. Perhaps the most notable failure of a private effort at peacemaking was that of the mission aboard Henry Ford's Peace Ship, which sailed in December 1915 to Scandinavia. The hope was that neutral governments might be induced to propose an armistice to the World War I belligerents. The movement met with sneers and jests in the United States and with general indifference in Europe.

Certainly one reason that the way of the peacemaker is hard is that the man in the crowd is inclined to suspect the practiced diplomat, at the same time — unfortunately — mocking self-appointed demonstrators or conciliators as crackpots.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Policy Must Be Reviewed

President Kennedy's speech before the United Nations General Assembly left the impression that the United States was not bound to principle, that it took a pragmatic, man-of-the-street practical view of the problems that face us. This impression is more due to language than to substance.

Our basic principle is freedom and as regards that we make no compromises whatsoever. It is necessary therefore to review the nature and trend of our foreign policy. The President had to adopt much of the Eisenhower policy because there must be some continuity. His own operations inside and outside the State Department are too complex for effective results. There are too many prima donnas, too many cordon bleu cooks; in simple English, too many stars playing the same role.

The time has come to check this and to get some of the brilliant talents who have concentrated in the realm of foreign affairs to function cooperatively without competition. Some of those who seemed so promising at the beginning of the Kennedy Administration are no longer very important.

One of the weaknesses of the hydra-headed State Department is that each man of talent pulls his own way and supports his own particular favorites among the great men of the world. For instance, Sukarno of Indonesia seems to be a favorite but without much justification. The Soviet "New Times" as recently as June 14, 1961 had an article entitled, "Our friend Sukarno." It is a warm article and it opens on a sweet note:

"When I decided to make a fourth round-the-world trip, I was aware that I would be spending by birthday, June 6, abroad. I therefore planned my itinerary in such a way as to be in the Soviet Union on that day. I did so because on my birthday I wanted to be in a country where I would feel at home, just as if I were among my own family."

Now, this Sukarno is supposed to be a neutral. He is supposed to be non-aligned. However, in this article he is "at home" in Soviet Russia, "just as if I were among my own family."

Sukarno never said in a speech that he felt at home in the United States. His neutrality does not go that far. He only comes to our country to get aid, a handout, or tell our President to make his own peace with Khrushchev on Khrushchev's terms.

Our policy ought to be that no aid should go to such as Sukarno, Tito, Castro, Nkrumah, directly or indirectly. Our policy ought to be that those who are not for us are against us, that a neutral is one who is just as much in favor of us as of Soviet Russia. Sukarno said at the Kremlin dinner:

"We have come to the conclusion that the progress of newly-liberated countries is being impeded by capitalism, colonialism and imperialism. We, that is, the Afro-Asian nations, have to contend with many difficulties, and we carefully study the attitude of other countries toward us. Our eyes are turned, first and foremost, to the Soviet Union because we know that it wants freedom for all nations that have proclaimed independence."

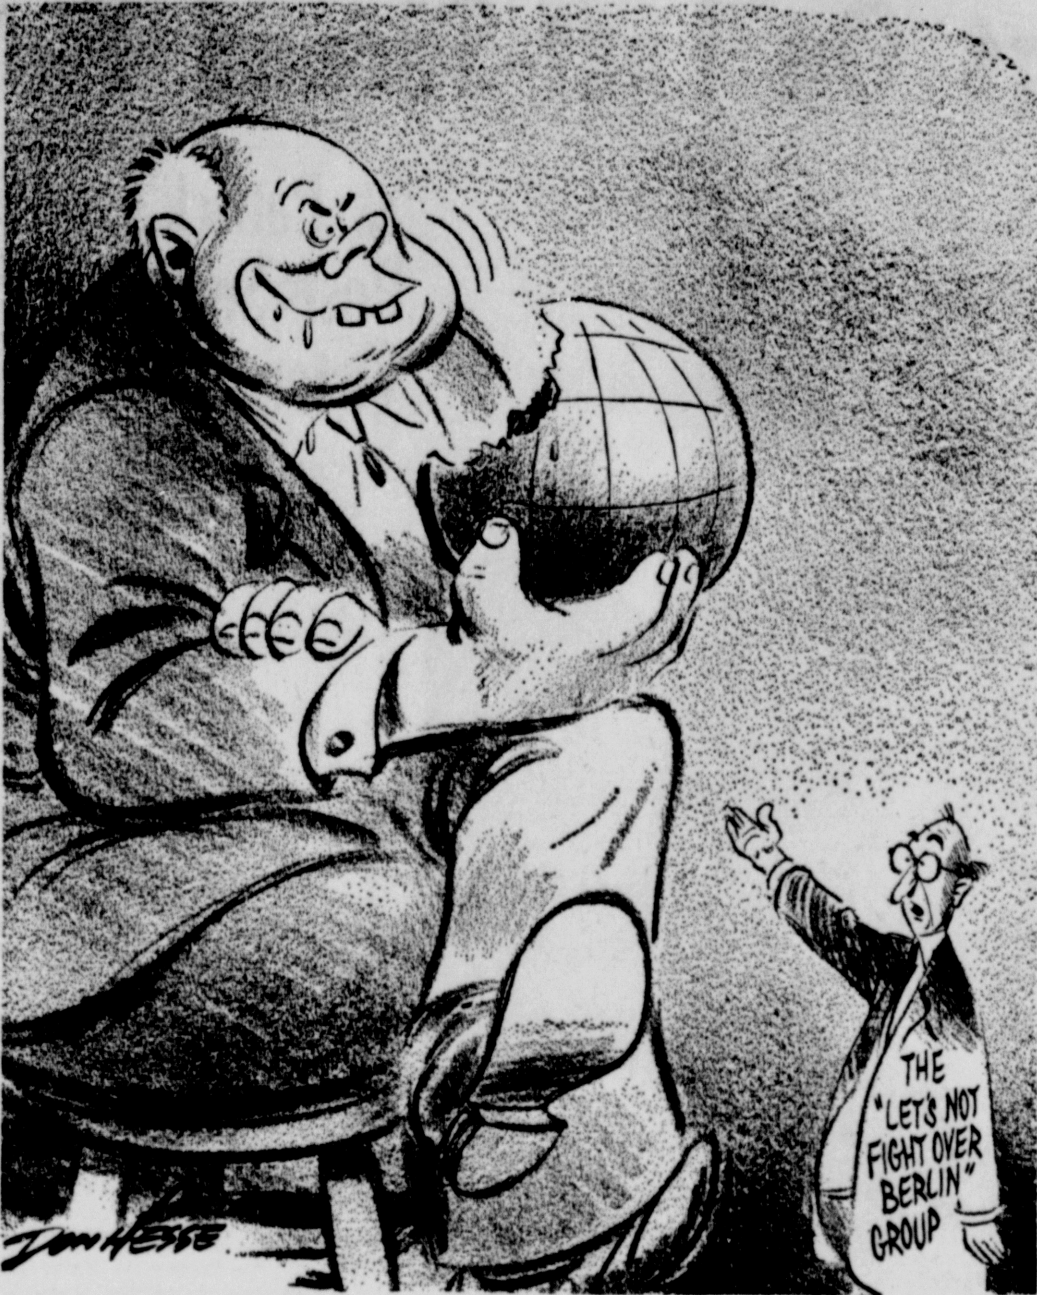

When a man who deliberately uttered this historic lie visited the White House to instruct the President on how he should conduct himself, he should have been told, by the porter, to go home and tend to his own Red knitting. Let him sit on Khrushchev's knee!

The President of the United States is alone responsible for the conduct of foreign policy. He alone must go before the voters to defend his course. Neither the Secretary of State nor the Under-Secretary of State, nor the Ambassador to the United Nations holds a position of equal responsibility.

He must therefore reorganize and simplify the formulation and conduct of our foreign policy. This needs to be done immediately because what with Chester Bowles arranging his own East Asian policy and "Soapy" Williams running all over Africa making promises which neither he nor the President can carry forward, we shall find ourselves in increasing difficulties.

Admitting that Adlai Stevenson is doing remarkably well in the United Nations, a difficulty arises because of Stevenson's prominence and significance. The assumption is too general that it is Adlai Stevenson who determines the foreign policy of the United States. This must be corrected if the President is to maintain his position. 'Why Worry About A Few Little Bites?'

New CIA Head Is An Able, Hard-boiled Man

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON The choice of John A. McCone to succeed Allen W. Dulles as director of the Central Intelligence Agency is a notable event, in several more ways than immediately meet the eye.

More importantly, this hard-boiled choice of an able, hard-boiled man to head the CIA gives an interesting indication of the development of the President's ideas about foreign policy-making during the storm-tossed and difficult months since he took office.

At the Inauguration, as now, there was an easily discernible division at the very heart of the Kennedy administration, between the hard-boiled and soft-boiled thinkers about world affairs. With Adlai E. Stevenson and Under-Secretary of State Chester Bowles at their head and many lesser adherents among the New Frontiersmen, the soft-boiled group enjoyed great prominence, and at first looked as though they might acquire great influence.

The contest of viewpoint was all the more interesting because it was not absolutely clear, at the outset, which viewpoint would finally be adopted by the President and Secretary of State Dean Rusk. After the Cuban failure, moreover, the CIA became the target of intense attack by the soft-boiled faction and their fairly numerous supporters outside the government.

This was natural, for the CIA necessarily sums up and symbolizes everything that the soft-boiled thinkers most detest. Their basic view is that it is immoral, illiberal, and un-American to treat the cold war as a true war in all respects but the intermittent absence of shooting. The CIA's basic purpose is to prosecute the cold war in a serious manner.

The actual suppression of the CIA was therefore rather loudly suggested in the bitter aftermath of the abortive Cuban enterprise. It was further indicated that if the CIA was not to be suppressed, then the wounded feelings of the pure in heart must be soled by the choice of someone with virtuously soft-boiled tendencies as Allan Dulles's successor.

The President has now rejected this advice, although it was pressed upon him with great vigor and volubility both in public and in private. To make the event more interesting, the rejection has taken place in stages.

In the first stage, a neutral appointee, not displeasing to either the hard-boiled or the soft-boiled thinkers, was sought. But the man considered at this stage, the new head of the foreign aid program, Fowler Hamilton, placed limits on the time he could serve, and there were other difficulties. The President's thought then began to move toward an unconcealed hard-boiled choice. The final result was the offer of the CIA directorship to John McCone.

Even before the appointment was announced, the protests began coming into the White House from university and other groups where soft-boiled ideas are most prevalent. As is usual in such cases, every issue but the central issue has been raised by McCone's attackers.

In other words, none of those protesting the appointment have said, straight out, "We don't want this man because he takes a hard-boiled view of Soviet purposes and of the cold war." But this was, of course, the real objection; for McCone's record of public service under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower speaks for itself.

When President Eisenhower first took office, McCone was proposed for the Secretaryship of the Air Force. But the new, Secretary of Defense of those days, the late Charles E. Wilson, told McCone that he could not have the job because he was "tainted with Trumanism." Secretary Wilson also objected to anyone who took the cold war too seriously, because of the inevitable effects on the national budget. And this was what he really meant by "tainted with Trumanism."

In truth, a shared prejudice, though a prejudice shared for widely different reasons, quite directly links the Wilson veto on the McCone appointment in 1953 and the present protest against the new McCone appointment.

But events of recent months have grimly underlined the folly of this prejudice against taking the cold war too seriously. On the right, it results in budget-limited defense programs. On the left, it results in fond, delusive hopes that the cold war can be comfortably transformed into a wordy "battle for the uncommitted nations." But the cold war remorselessly continues, and if it is not taken seriously, it will be lost, and the cause of freedom will also be lost.

Pushbutton Diagnosis Possible In Near Future

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Electrical computers may be used for diagnosis in the near future. The physician will collect his data in the usual way, push several buttons, and — presto — the cause of your trouble will be disclosed. This type of automation will free the physician from keeping in his brain the mass of statistics required in making a diagnosis.

Dr. Homer R. Warner and colleagues at the University of Utah worked on the mathematical approach to the diagnosis of congenital heart disease. They found electric computers useful, even though a large number of calculations were required to make every diagnosis. These physicians stress the point that the results were no better than the material collected by the physician and submitted to the machine.

This brings us back to human frailty. Physicians may not obtain correct statistics because they are biased by what may be wrong with the patient. It is a matter of deciding what is important and what is unimportant.

Dizziness, for example, is a common symptom but means different things to different people. It may be described as lightheadedness, a tendency to fall to the left, a sensation similar to walking on a soft mattress, or a feeling as though the world were spinning around. Furthermore, dizziness may be constant or temporary and may be more noticeable when standing or lying down. Some victims have an associated nausea or ringing of the ears.

There are so many causes of dizziness, the exact symptoms and findings must be lined up in perfect order to obtain the right diagnosis.

The same can be said of abdominal pain. If the physician does not question the patient carefully and with an open mind, he is likely to come up with the wrong set of symptoms. The computer doesn't know the difference and when the wrong buttons are punched, the diagnosis is peptic ulcer instead of gallstones.

The pattern becomes more complicated when the machine also supplies the treatment of choice. Machines have many advantages over humans but they are no better than the man who makes and runs them. They recall the correct statistics upon which to base a conclusion that will not be biased by irrelevant factors. Furthermore, the instruments perform just as well in the middle of the night as at 10 a. m.

TOMORROW: Epilepsy research.

ATTENTION TO DRIVING L. M. writes: Why do I get carsick when I'm a passenger and not when I'm driving.

REPLY Possibly because you are concentrating on driving and not on getting sick. The eyes of the driver are "tuned on the road, anticipating curves and bumps. This tends to reduce the bad effects on the ears of sudden changes in motion. Some passengers who get sick when riding in the back seat do well up in front.

INTERNAL TUMORS Mrs. C. writes: It is possible for a woman to develop an internal growth 10 years after a hysterectomy?

REPLY Yes. Tumors may develop from the ovaries, cervix, or other abdominal organs.

THRUSH HURTS A. J. A. writes: Is it normal for a truss to hurt?

REPLY No, but many wearers feel uncomfortable unless the device is fitted properly.

HOT BREADS Mrs. P. writes: Is it harmful to eat piping hot breads and rolls — right out of the oven?

REPLY No. Some nationalities prefer certain foods hot; others like them tepid or cool.

MOURNS LOSS N. L. writes: Could change in personality be blamed on a crash diet that resulted in extensive weight loss?

REPLY Yes, especially if the individual was a neurotic and received emotional satisfaction from eating or from his overweight.

REPLY The crash diet and weight loss eliminated this satisfaction and may have made the individual unhappy.

FAMILY DOCTORS D. V. writes: Is the family doctor the same as a general practitioner?

REPLY Any physician can be your family doctor. The majority are general practitioners because they are prepared to treat most of the medical problems that occur in a family. They call in specialists when consultation is needed.

To the strict or space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made after strict stamping envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

"Mr. Hellinger, as I always refer to myself in public, hereby offers his thanks to the following:

"To King Features Syndicate, for permitting him to republish much of the material in this book. To O. Henry and Guy de Maupassant, for the same reason."

"To the Underwood Typewriter Company, for creating machines which can be operated with one finger. To Saks, for underwear that does not bind while seated at the typewriter. To the Althaus Pharmacy, for delivering aspirin, alanol, cigarettes, Bromo Seltzer and Dr. Hinkle's Pink Pills at ten per cent off the list price."

"To the lady in the apartment upstairs, for stopping her tap dancing at 4 every morning while this book was being written. To my wife, for permitting me to work, and for going out to the movies three times a week alone, I hope."

"The Ten Million" did not do well. Years later, Mr. Hellinger became a producer of motion pictures in Hollywood. He told one of his bosses that he had written books. The boss did not believe him. Hellinger combed all the second-hand book dealers looking for a copy of "The Ten Million."

When at last, he found one, the bookseller asked $25 for it. Hellinger blew up. "A new copy only costs $2.50," he hollered. "Why $25?" The clerk flipped open the fly leaf. "This one," he said smugly, "is autographed." . . .

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI)—Sure-footed Steve Myhra kicked a 52-yard field goal in the final second of play Sunday to give the Baltimore Colts an almost incredible 34-33 National Football League victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

Minnesota had taken a 33-31 lead on a 29-yard field goal by rookie Mike Mercer with only 38 seconds to play. The Colts then took the Vikings' kickoff and moved quickly downfield on passes from quarterback Johnny Unitas to halfback Lennie Moore.

With time left for only one more play, coach Weeb Ewbank sent in his ace kicker, Myhra's towering boot sailed over the uprights at the precise moment the game ended to snatch victory from almost certain defeat.

Earlier in the quarter, Myhra had kicked a 37-yard field goal. The winning score was sort of retribution for the Colts. Last week they lost on a 49-yard field goal by Detroit's Jim Martin in the last minute of play.

The victory gave Baltimore a 2-1 record and marked Minnesota's second straight loss after an opening game triumph.

Almost overshadowed by the dramatic fashion in which the Colts came from behind to win, were four touchdowns by Moore to tie the club's single game record.

Moore scored three of his touchdowns on passes, two from Unitas and one from second-string quarterback Lamar McHan. One of Unitas' pass plays covered 77 yards. In addition, Moore ran four yards for another score.

Myhra led the Vikings with four field goals. Minnesota recorded other tallies on two touchdowns passes by quarterback George Shaw, one to end A. B. Williams and another to end Jerry Reichow, and a four-yard run by back Raymond Hayes in the final quarter.

AFTER GEORGE DID IT—Steve Johnson, left, congratulates George Petras after the latter won the 40th fall golf championship yesterday at the Cumberland Country Club. Petras, who bagged his first title in 1959, toured the 35 holes in even par in defeating Johnson, 2 and 1. It was Petras' fifth win in the championship flight. ## Petras Defeats Johnson, Cops CCC Fall Golf Title

Keyserite Scores 2 And 1 Victory To Claim 40th Event

George Petras, plant manager for the Emerson-Pryne Company, of Keyser, won the fall golf championship at the Cumberland Country Club for the second time in three years by turning back youthful Steve Johnson, 2 and 1, in the 36-hole final yesterday.

Johnson was trying for a sweep of the club's two major titles, having won the spring handicap championship by defeating Orville Jackson in the finals.

Petras copped the fall title in 1959 and won five matches to capture the honors this year. Before he disposed of Johnson in the finals, he defeated Ed Gratton, John Wilson, Joe Gratton and Jerome Ellenson.

Petras toured the 36 holes in even par, 73-67-140, had two three-putts greens and knocked two balls out-of-bounds. Johnson's 36-hole total of 142 was two over par. Steve had three-putts greens.

Yesterday's match climaxed the 40th fall championship race at the Cumberland Country Club. John Rokisky was the 1960 fall champion.

In addition to winning the spring titles Johnson copped the district and state Jaycee championships this year.

Hole-by-hole summary of Sunday's title match:

Par: 354 343 444-36

U.S. Holds 2-1 Edge In Davis Cup Zone Play

McKinley, Dell Beat India Doubles Team

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The United States enters the closing two singles matches of the Davis Cup interzone tennis final against India Monday with bright prospects of turning the 2-1 match lead into a trip to Rome.

The doubles victory of Chuck McKinley and Donald Dell over India's Ramanathan Krishnan and Premjit Lall Sunday, after the teams split the opening singles, gave the Americans a commanding lead. The scores were 5-7, 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

One more singles victory will put the United States into battle with Italy for the right to challenge Australia's possession of the big silver cup. The matches at Rome are Oct. 13-15 and the challenge round in Australia will be played in December.

Whitney Reed, 29, of Oakland, Calif., will try to provide that decisive victory in the first singles match Monday. The experienced American meets India's Jaidip Mukerjee, 19.

Both Reed and Mukerjee lost in straight sets in the opening singles Saturday—Reed to Krishnan and Mukerjee to McKinley—but Reed is considered by far the stronger of the two.

McKinley is due to play Krishnan in the closing battle of the two nations' stars. Both men were defeated by Australia's Rod Laver at Wimbledon this year—Krishnan in the semifinals and McKinley in the finals.

Browns Defeat Cowboys, 25 To 7

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland Browns halted the vaunted Dallas offense Sunday and unhorsed the Cowboys, 25-7, vaulting into a multiple tie for the top in the Eastern Conference of the National Football League.

The Cowboys, who had led the league in passing, yards gained and scoring, did not have a chance Sunday as they were held to 32 yards rushing and 100 passing—most of which came in a late flurry after victory was out of reach.

The Browns—despite giving up the ball on three fumbles and a pass interception—rolled up a 25-0 lead before Dallas could make a move.

Haynes, returning to full-time action after a lengthy stay on the injury list, led the Texans to a 20-7 half-time bulge. His 32-yard punt return set up the first touchdown, made by Spikes on a 31-yard run. His runs kept the second Dallas drive going and he raced 24 yards for the touchdown.

St. Patrick's vs. St. Michael's (Mt. Calvary)

St. Patrick's eked out a 13-12 decision over SS. Peter & Paul and St. Michael's won over St. Mary's 6-0, in Catholic Youth Football League games staged Sunday.

The victory was St. Patrick's second in a row. St. Mary's defending champions, dropped their second straight game while SS. Peter & Paul and St. Michael's are now 1-1.

Conversion Decides

In the contest here, the "Fighting Irish," in charge of Joe Chorpennig and Harold "Buck" Shober in the absence of Father Arthur Bastress, won the game in the final period when Denny Carolan ran 18 yards for the tie and added the extra point on an end run.

SS. Peter and Paul, however, made it a "photo finish" by scoring a touchdown with 23 seconds left to play but failed to register the point that would have tied the score.

Jim Hillebrecht ran 20 yards on a reverse play to give SS. Peter & Paul a 6-0 lead in the opening period but St. Patrick's tied it up at 6-6 in the second period when Billy Zapf raced 19 yards to paydirt.

Score On Pass

After St. Patrick's took a 13-6 lead early in the final period, the West Siders made it close when John Sharp passed eight yards to Jim Brannon for the game's final score.

St. Patrick's gained 168 yards rushing to the opposition's 161. The league leaders posted 11 first downs to SS. Peter & Paul ten. The losers completed six of eight aerials to one out of three for the winners.

Outstanding players were Carolan, Bill Twigg, Don Shober, Zapf, Fred Morocco and Pat O'Rourke of St. Patrick's and Kerry Kelly, John McElfish, Hillebrecht, Brannon and Sharp of SS. Peter and Paul.

Femi Makes Only Score

At Frostburg, Arthur "Pooch" Femi scored the game's only touchdown in the second period on a 32-yard run.

St. Mary's muffed two scoring opportunities when receivers dropped passes that were fired into the end zone.

Femi excelled on defense and offense while "Buddy" Evans, Mark Conway, Dan Eberly and Regis Arnold also stood out for St. Michael's. Gary Lueck and Sam and Nick Perlozzo in the backfield and Ike Drake and Don Humbertson on the line were the Geels' outstanding players.

Greenpoint Inn Handed First Tourney Setback

Hyndman Victor By 10-2 Score; Bennett's Ousted

Greenpoint Inn's Old Exports suffered their first setback, yesterday in the Western Maryland Softball Tournament, bowing to Hyndman's Vets and Junior Brelsford, 10-2, at Penn Avenue field.

The loss was the first for Greenpoint which had won four straight games in the double elimination tournament. The Old Exports drew a bye into the finals.

Hyndman chalked up its fourth win against a single loss in tournament play as Brelsford held the Inn's to four hits. He struck out four and walked two.

Greenpoint tallied both its runs in the first inning on singles by Walt Basilio, Buddy Meade and Joe Biggs, plus an error by Brelsford. Rich Lybarger obtained the losers' other base knock, also a single.

Vohn Lehman belted a triple and a leadoff home run in the third inning to pace Hyndman at the plate. Joe Sager chipped in with two singles and a double. Stan Robertson had three singles and Bill Jamison collected a single and a two-bagger and batted in three runs for the winners.

In the second game of yesterday's doubleheader at Penn Avenue, the Cumberland VFW ousted Bennett's Transfer, 3-1 behind the four-hit pitching of Pete Elliott.

The victory, fourth in the tournament, put the Cumberland Vets into today's semi-final contest against the Hyndman Vets at 6:30 p.m.

The Cumberland Vets, Rocking Chair champions, hopped off to a two-run lead in the first inning when Ted Durbin singled and came all the way home when the right fielder let the ball go through him for an error. A double by Mil Dean, an infield hit by Jimmy Eckard and a force out produced the second tally.

The Vets added their final run in the third when Vern Penner singled and rode home on George McGregor's two-bagger.

Durbin had a pair of singles, Dean a two-bagger and McGregor a single and double to lead the Vets in hitting. Hank Page's double was the only extra base blow for Bennett's.

Today's winner between the two VFW teams will clash with Greenpoint Inn for the tournament title in the finale at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

In games Saturday the Hyndman VFW eliminated Kelco Credit Union, 8-4; Cumberland VFW ousted the defending champion Sports Shoppe, 6-1; and Bennett's lost its first game to Greenpoint Inn, 5-2.

Tournament officials announced last night that there will be no consolation game. Bennett's will finish in fourth place and the loser of today's battle between the two VFW teams will take third. The results:

Hyndman VFW 022 024-10 12-3
Vern Lowery and Junior Eversole, Junior Brelsford and Jim Shaffer, HR—Lehman (Hyndman).

SECOND GAME

49ers Blast Lions, 49 To 0

DETROIT (AP)—The San Francisco 49ers murdered the Detroit Lions' heralded defense with a shotgun offense, a rotating quarterback system and a tough defense of their own Sunday and pulled off a 49-0 upset.

The 49ers, with Joe Brodie, Bill Kilmer and Bobby Waters operating the shotgun with equal effectiveness, handed the Lions their first loss of the three-week-old National Football League season. The shutout was the first for Detroit in 115 games, including postseason play, since San Francisco blanked them in 1952.

Fire Prevention Activities Set October 8-14

Firemen To Honor William G. Barger

The Allegany-Garrett Volunteer Firemen's Association yesterday made final plans for Fire Prevention Week which will be observed October 8-14.

The various fire departments made reports on the activities each will carry out next week, and Cromwell C. Zembower, chairman of the fire prevention committee, reminded all units about the award which will be given to the individual who contributes the most to fire prevention.

Winner of the competition will receive the "James E. Lamberson Award" which will be given at the association's golden anniversary convention to be held in June at Frostburg.

The association also announced it will hold a testimonial dinner next month to honor William G. Barger, who has served as Allegany County civil defense director since 1960.

Transferred To Texas

Mr. Barger recently was named head engineer of the new Kelly-Springfield Tire Company's plant at Tyler, Texas.

David E. Kirk, Bowling Green, chairman of the dinner, said the tentative date for the event is Saturday, November 11. It will be open to the public and additional information will be announced later. Assisting Mr. Kirk with arrangements are Francis Philpot, Shaft, and George F. Comp Jr., Deer Park.

Mr. Kirk said Mr. Barger will be honored for helping the association to get radios and other equipment and services during the past 11 years.

In other action at yesterday's meeting it was announced the association will take part in the annual muscular dystrophy drive, and canisters were given to the various units to be distributed in business places.

Departments interested in training courses were informed to contact Robert Byrns, director of fire service extension, at Box 85, University of Maryland at College Park.

The courses are held over a 20-week period and are taught by an officer approved by the fire service extension. Companies planning to start the courses soon are Luke, Westernport, Bowman's Addition, Oakland, Deer Park and Barton.

George F. Comp Jr., Deer Park, chairman of the speakers bureau, said several PTA groups have requested speakers for their programs. He said any other group interested in obtaining a speaker should contact him or Mr. Zembower in LaVale.

Oyster Feed Planned

The ways and means committee announced the annual oyster feed will be held December 8. A hall is still needed for the event and any department interested in providing a location should contact Alvin Rankin, Frostburg, who is serving as chairman of the oyster feed.

The association also held memorial services yesterday for several members who died recently. Honored were Edward R. Muir, Midland, a past president of the unit, Anthony LaPorta, Frostburg, and Jacob Dilgard, Gorman.

The annual heroism award will be awarded posthumously next month to James E. Lamberson, Barton fire chief, who died while rescuing two small children from a burning trailer on May 31 in Frostburg.

The award will be given to Mr. Lamberson's wife, Mrs. Jean Lamberson, at the next meeting of the association on Sunday, November 5 at Westernport.

He was struck by a car driven by Ronald C. Lynch, 20, of 429 Central Avenue. City Police Officer Joseph Harvey investigated the accident and said it occurred in the 200 block of Central Avenue about 60 feet west of Maryland Avenue.

The accident was termed unavoidable and no charges were placed against the driver, police said.

Northern High Wins FFA Land Judging Match

The Future Farmers of America chapter at Northern High School in Garrett County won the land judging contest Saturday on the farm of Wilbert Paul, Mt. Savage.

Lawrence Faith, v.o.-ag teacher at the school, who instructed the youths in preparation for the contest, said the winning team was composed of Richard Bowser and Edward Weimer, both juniors, and Edward Deal, a tenth grader.

They will travel to College Park in June where teams of FFA chapters from eight regions in the state will compete for honors. Allegany and Garrett counties are in Region I.

The winning team accumulated a total of 689 points out of a possible 900 points, according to Mr. Faith, who said the top point-getter on Flintstone's chapter which placed second was Ronald Stafford.

Thomas Uphold was high score entrant for Southern High in Garrett County which placed third in the competition.

Among those on hand for the contest were Martin M. Gordon, work unit conservatorship of the Soil Conservation Service office here and Paul M. Gailbreath, associate extension soil conservationist of the SCS.

The teams judged deep well and shallow well drain soils, imperfectly drained soils and poorly drained soils.

Kenneth Stone, soil scientist of the local SCS office, picked out the areas on the farm where the holes were dug to a depth of one to three feet.

The event was sponsored by the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

Rodents May Carry Rabies, Minke Warns

If you have a rodent as a pet you may be asking for exposure to rabies, Regional Game Warden Joseph A. Minke said yesterday. Three Allegany counties are undergoing the Pasteur treatment after having been bitten by rodents that laboratory tests show were infected with rabies, Mr. Minke said.

He said Dr. R. B. Shillinger, in charge of the Maryland State Live Stock and Sanitary Laboratory at Hagerstown, made tests of the rodents and of several others that were turned over to him by game wardens after they had bitten people.

Mr. Minke said chipmunks, flying squirrels, bats, mice and practically all types of rodents have been known to carry rabies, and that health authorities warn against keeping them as pets.

Schedule Set For Tying In Big Water Line

Pressure Test Begins Wednesday

A schedule has been set up for the completion of the relocation of a city water transmission line in the Long Hill area during the next two weeks.

The tentative schedule was set up Friday at a meeting in City Hall attended by Simon K. Carroll, superintendent of water transmission and distribution; Charles Baker, Water Department staffer who is serving as inspector; C. R. Nuzum, city engineer, and Charles Scarlett, assistant city engineer, and Orrie Sensabaugh, contractor for the $73,823 project.

The schedule calls for crews to begin filling the new section of line with water this Wednesday.

Some 200,000 gallons of water will be needed to fill the section of line. When filled, pressure will be brought up to 100 pounds to the square inch and held at that point for 24 hours. Chlorine will be added to the water to sterilize the line.

Plans call for crews to shut down the existing 36-inch water main on the morning of October 15, and to have the line empty by late afternoon.

The job of connecting the new section of line to the existing line is scheduled for October 16. Work will be done at both ends of the line and will continue until the new section is tied in.

Mr. Nuzum said the schedule will be subject to satisfactory weather conditions.

The relocation of some 2,200 feet of the transmission line was necessary due to the modernization of Route 40 in the Long Hill section.

The last section of the line was laid by the contracting firm on Friday.

Women Can Be Officers

Major Irvin Selko, Baltimore, commander of Air Force recruiting in this area, states that the recent Presidential request for an increase in military manpower also includes "woman power."

The Air Force has an increased need for women to train to become commissioned officers, he said. As officers in the AF, women receive the same pay, prestige, travel and promotion opportunities as male officers.

Basic qualifications for entrance into officers training are college graduate, single, between ages of 20½ and 30, in good physical condition and an American citizen.

Selected applicants attend the three-month officer training school near San Antonio, Texas. Upon completion of OTS, the trainees are commissioned as second lieutenants and sent to further schooling or to one of the many positions open to women.

Further information may be obtained from T/Sgt. Albert Hammed and S/Sgt. Harold Harlow, local Air Force recruiters, at the Post Office Building.

Bids Are Sought

The City of Cumberland is advertising for bids, to be opened October 9 at 10 a. m., for the widening of North Mechanic Street.

Md. Democrats Focus Efforts On Senate

Party Attacks Sen. Butler

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS A Democrat has not represented Maryland in the U. S. Senate since 1952, a fact which promises to draw a concentrated campaign effort from Maryland's Democratic forces.

One of the two Senate seats has been occupied by Republican John Marshall Butler since 1950, when he defeated the late Millard E. Tydings. That one is up for election next year, and Butler intends to seek a third term.

Maryland's junior senator, J. Glenn Beall, also a Republican, was elected in 1952, succeeding the late Herbert R. O'Connor Sr., also a former Maryland governor.

In a statement released Saturday, a Democratic party leader attacked the legislative record of Butler.

The statement by Dr. Clarence D. Long, executive co-chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, was aimed particularly at Butler's stand on the housing, minimum wage and area redevelopment programs of the Kennedy Administration. Butler voted against each of those bills, a move which prompted Long to accuse the senator of "blithely ignoring the needs of the state."

Cities Redevelopment

"Apparently," said Long, "Sen. Butler was unaware that the President's area redevelopment program has particular significance to Garrett County and to the Cumberland, Hagerstown and Cambridge areas."

Long noted that each has qualified for federal assistance under the area redevelopment program. Detailed redevelopment plans submitted by Hagerstown and Cambridge officials have been approved, and Cambridge already has received $213,000 to improve sewage facilities.

In other weekend developments, Democratic gubernatorial candidate George P. Mahoney squelched any ideas party leaders might have of a "harmony ticket" headed by Gov. Tawes, and David Hume, another candidate for governor, renewed his attack on Southern Maryland slot machine interests.

Mahoney said some Democrats were asking this question: "Why can't we have another harmony ticket like in 1958 and avoid a bitter primary?"

"Harmony From Discord?"

He replied, "In view of the general unpopularity of the Tawes Administration, it is unrealistic to wish for a harmony ticket headed by Mr. Tawes in 1962."

"The governor and his cronies can hardly expect to pluck harmony from the discord which they have created."

Mahoney, who will be seeking the gubernatorial nomination for the third time, heads a ticket which includes Del. Blair Lee III, D-Montgomery, for U. S. senator, and State Sen. Samuel Barrick, D-Frederick, for state attorney general.

The only other major candidate so far in the Senate race is Rep. Daniel Brewster, D-Md., who has been aligned with the ticket Gov. Tawes is expected to head. Tawes still has not detailed his intentions for 1962.

While declining to point to anyone in particular, Hume claimed that Southern Maryland politicians have reserved comment about gambling activities in Southern Maryland because that industry is the source of sizable campaign contributions.

Battler Against Slots Hume, former treasurer of the Maryland Democratic Party, has long been a leader in the fight against slot machines. He said Saturday there was a certain federal investigation would show that financial interest in Southern Maryland's slots "stretches far beyond the boundaries of this state."

A Washington attorney, Hume lives in Charles County, one of four in Southern Maryland where slot machines and commercial bingo are legal. The other counties are Anne Arundel, Calvert and St. Marys.

Other members include Francis Nicholas Dickel, Mt. Savage; Bessie R. Baird, Edith D. Miller, Herman J. Miller, Anna M. Egan, George O. Hollar, John G. Thomas, Anna M. Mullan, Courtney C. Chaney and Lawrence G. Day, all of this city; Horace H. Richards, Westernport; Robert Todd Hadley and Wilbur J. Lancaster, both of Lonaconing; William J. Keller and John J. Byrnes, both of Eckhart; Frank H. Lewis and Martha Lee Van Horn, both of LaVale; George Fatkin, Frostburg; Taylor J. Van Meter, North Branch; Harry V. Andrews, Barton; Vada P. ## Grand Jury Opens Today

Seventeen men and six women who constitute the October grand jury for Allegany County Circuit Court will assemble in the courtroom at 10 o'clock this morning to hear the charge from Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris.

There are indications that this grand jury may be a harder working one than others in recent years. State's Attorney James S. Getty and his assistant, Donald W. Mason, have about 20 matters to present to the grand jury. It is expected that the grand jurors will be in session four or five days this week.

Two shootings, an armed robbery and a case of suspected perjury are among the cases to be considered this week.

Carl O. Belt of Park Heights is the grand jury foreman.

Other members include Francis Nicholas Dickel, Mt. Savage; Bessie R. Baird, Edith D. Miller, Herman J. Miller, Anna M. Egan, George O. Hollar, John G. Thomas, Anna M. Mullan, Courtney C. Chaney and Lawrence G. Day, all of this city; Horace H. Richards, Westernport; Robert Todd Hadley and Wilbur J. Lancaster, both of Lonaconing; William J. Keller and John J. Byrnes, both of Eckhart; Frank H. Lewis and Martha Lee Van Horn, both of LaVale; George Fatkin, Frostburg; Taylor J. Van Meter, North Branch; Harry V. Andrews, Barton; Vada P. Barnard, Bowling Green, and Herbert Dye Jr., Midland.

Signers of the telegram urging Tawes to support anti-discrimination legislation were the Baltimore Jewish Council, the Catholic Interracial Council of the Baltimore Archdiocese, the Maryland Council of Churches, the State and Baltimore AFL-CIO, the Baltimore Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Indifference" Charged The telegram said its signers were "particularly embarrassed over the indifference and lack of leadership shown by Maryland officials" in respect to anti-discrimination legislation.

Tawes said two weeks ago he was leaving the matter in the hands of the Legislative Council, and would take no personal stand until the Council reached a conclusion.

The 1962 General Assembly convenes in February. Observers feel that anti-discrimination legislation would stand little chance of passage without the Governor's direct support.

The State Department has told the Legislative Council it strongly favors anti-discrimination laws for Maryland, in hopes of ending international embarrassment over incidents along U. S. 40 between Washington and the Delaware state line. A number of African diplomats have complained that they were refused service in establishments along the road.

The State Department also has launched a grass-roots campaign aimed at persuading businessmen along the road to change discriminatory serving policies.

Address Clarified Rev. James W. Brookman of 336 Dorn Avenue, told the News that Jacob B. Markwood, who was arrested by city police on Tuesday night, does not live at that address.

Markwood was nabbed last week in connection with the breaking and entering and theft of about $30 from a fruit stand on the outskirts of Moorefield. When he was booked by local police the Dorn Avenue address was given.

Boosters Meet Today The Ridgely High School Boosters Club will meet today at 7:30 p. m. in the high school. A report by the membership committee will be given and a discussion will be held on fund-raising projects.

Scout Training Courses Slated For District

Group Leadership Will Be Stressed

The Shawnee Girl Scout Council training committee has included a number of training courses in the fall schedule.

Basic group leadership for all new leaders, assistants and troop committee members will be given in three different places.

The first will be at the Girl Scout House, 72 Greene Street, on four consecutive Tuesdays from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. (EDT) beginning tomorrow.

Another will be in Bedford at Trinity Lutheran Church, beginning Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. (EST); and the third will be in the Oakland Scout Hall from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. (EST) on four consecutive Fridays beginning this Friday.

First sessions of all these courses will include the fundamentals of scouting, tools for a leader, membership requirements, the leader's job, elements of a troop meeting, history of scouting, interpreting the promise and laws, games and songs.

Applications for training are available from the Scout House or the neighborhood service team. Each member is requested to take a simple lunch to each session, a notebook and pencil, a Scout handbook and leader's guide, the latter which may be purchased after the first session.

Mrs. Ruby Adams, local field director, will conduct the courses.

Workshops for advanced leaders will be conducted on a neighborhood basis during October and November. Each neighborhood's workshop will be based on requested topics from the leaders and committee members through their neighborhood chairman.

There is no charge for any of the training courses—apart of the council's services as a participating member of the County United Fund.

Law Can't End Discrimination, Hume Declares

BALTIMORE (AP) — While six organizations joined this weekend in urging Gov. Tawes to give his personal backing to anti-discrimination legislation, one of Tawes' political opponents asserted that such legislation alone would not be effective.

A telegram signed jointly by the anti-discrimination groups urged Tawes to call a special session of the General Assembly to enact equal-rights legislation, which would require Maryland restaurant and hotel owners to serve Negroes.

David Hume, an announced Democratic candidate for the governorship, asserted Sunday that Tawes was mistaken in referring proposed equal-rights legislation to the Legislative Council, the between-sessions study arm of the General Assembly.

"Legislation alone is not now and never has been the answer to a controversy such as this," Hume said.

Public Support Needed "Without public discussion and public understanding, no law can be effective — no matter what measures we may take to cram the law down the throats of a people who have not had the opportunity to understand the issue involved. Our faith must be, as it always has been, in a people educated and alerted to a problem," he said.

Hume added, however, that if equal-rights legislation were before the General Assembly right now and he were a member of that body, he would vote in favor of it. Hume broke away from the main Maryland Democratic organization last year after a series of disputes with Tawes.

Signers of the telegram urging Tawes to support anti-discrimination legislation were the Baltimore Jewish Council, the Catholic Interracial Council of the Baltimore Archdiocese, the Maryland Council of Churches, the State and Baltimore AFL-CIO, the Baltimore Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Fire Prevention Activities Set October 8-14

Firemen To Honor William G. Barger

The Allegany-Garrett Volunteer Firemen's Association yesterday made final plans for Fire Prevention Week which will be observed October 8-14.

The various fire departments made reports on the activities each will carry out next week, and Cromwell C. Zembower, chairman of the fire prevention committee, reminded all units about the award which will be given to the individual who contributes the most to fire prevention.

Winner of the competition will receive the "James E. Lamberson Award" which will be given at the association's golden anniversary convention to be held in June at Frostburg.

The association also announced it will hold a testimonial dinner next month to honor William G. Barger, who has served as Allegany County civil defense director since 1950.

Transferred To Texas

Mr. Barger recently was named head engineer of the new Kelly-Springfield Tire Company's plant at Tyler, Texas.

David E. Kirk, Bowling Green, chairman of the dinner, said the tentative date for the event is Saturday, November 11. It will be open to the public and additional information will be announced later. Assisting Mr. Kirk with arrangements are Francis Philpot, Shaft, and George F. Comp Jr., Deer Park.

Mr. Kirk said Mr. Barger will be honored for helping the association to get radios and other equipment and services during the past 11 years.

In other action at yesterday's meeting it was announced the association will take part in the annual muscular dystrophy drive, and canisters were given to the various units to be distributed in business places.

Departments interested in training courses were informed to contact Robert Byrus, director of fire service extension, at Box 85, University of Maryland at College Park.

The courses are held over a 20-week period and are taught by an officer approved by the fire service extension. Companies planning to start the courses soon are Luke, Westernport, Bowman's Addition, Oakland, Deer Park and Barton.

George F. Comp Jr., Deer Park, chairman of the speakers bureau, said several PTA groups have requested speakers for their programs. He said any other group interested in obtaining a speaker should contact him or Mr. Zembower in LaVale.

Oyster Feed Planned

The ways and means committee announced the annual oyster feed will be held December 8. A hall is still needed for the event and any department interested in providing a location should contact Alvin Rankin, Frostburg, who is serving as chairman of the oyster feed.

The association also held memorial services yesterday for several members who died recently. Honored were Edward R. Muir, Midland, a past president of the unit, Anthony LaPorta, Frostburg, and Jacob Dilgard, Gorman.

The annual heroism award will be awarded posthumously next month to James E. Lamberson, Barton fire chief, who died while rescuing two small children from a burning trailer on May 31 in Frostburg.

The award will be given to Mr. Lamberson's wife, Mrs. Jean Lamberson, at the next meeting of the association on Sunday, November 5 at Westernport.

A five-year-old local boy, who was hit by car on Central Avenue yesterday afternoon was admitted to Memorial Hospital for observation.

Attaches said John T. Lachance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lachance, 102 Altamont Terrace, was bruised in the accident. He is in "satisfactory" condition.

He was struck by a car driven by Ronald C. Lynch, 20, of 425 Central Avenue. City Police Officer Joseph Harvey investigated the accident and said it occurred in the 200 block of Central Avenue, about 600 feet west of Maryland Avenue.

The accident was termed unavoidable and no charges were placed against the driver, police said.

Northern High Wins FFA Land Judging Match

The Future Farmers of America chapter at Northern High School in Garrett County won the land judging contest Saturday on the farm of Wilbert Paul, Mt. Savage.

Lawrence Faith, vo-ag teacher at the school, who instructed the youths in preparation for the contest, said the winning team was composed of Richard Bowser and Edward Weimer, both juniors, and Edward Deal, a tenth grader.

They will travel to College Park in June where teams of FFA chapters from eight regions in the state will compete for honors. Allegany and Garrett counties are in Region I.

The winning team accumulated a total of 689 points out of a possible 900 points, according to Mr. Faith, who said the top point-getter on Flintstone's chapter which placed second was Ronald Stafford.

Thomas Uphold was high scorer for Southern High in Garrett County which placed third in the competition.

Among those on hand for the contest were Martin M. Gordon, work unit conservator of the Soil Conservation Service office here and Paul M. Gailbreath, associate extension soil conservationist of the SCS.

The teams judged deep well and shallow well drain soils, imperfectly drained soils and poorly drained soils.

Kenneth Stone, soil scientist of the local SCS office, picked out the areas on the farm where the holes were dug to a depth of one to three feet.

The event was sponsored by the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

Rodents May Carry Rabies, Minke Warns

If you have a rodent as a pet you may be asking for exposure to rabies, Regional Game Warden Joseph A. Minke said yesterday.

Three Allegany countians are undergoing the Pasteur treatment after having been bitten by rodents that laboratory tests show were infected with rabies, Mr. Minke said.

He said Dr. R. B. Shillinger, in charge of the Maryland State Live Stock and Sanitary Laboratory at Hagerstown, made tests of the rodents and of several others that were turned over to him by game wardens after they had bitten people.

Mr. Minke said chipmunks, flying squirrels, bats, mice and practically all types of rodents have been known to carry rabies, and that health authorities warn against keeping them as pets.

Schedule Set For Tying In Big Water Line

Pressure Test Begins Wednesday

A schedule has been set up for the completion of the relocation of a city water transmission line in the Long Hill area during the next two weeks.

The tentative schedule was set up Friday at a meeting in City Hall attended by Simon K. Carroll, superintendent of water transmission and distribution; Charles Baker, Water Department staffer who is serving as inspector; C. R. Nuzum, city engineer, and Charles Scarlett, assistant city engineer, and Orrie Sensabaugh, contractor for the $73,823 project.

The schedule calls for crews to begin filling the new section of line with water this Wednesday.

Some 200,000 gallons of water will be needed to fill the section of line. When filled, pressure will be brought up to 100 pounds to the square inch and held at that point for 24 hours. Chlorine will be added to the water to sterilize the line.

Plans call for crews to shut down the existing 36-inch water main on the morning of October 15, and to have the line empty by late afternoon.

The job of connecting the new section of line to the existing line is scheduled for October 16. Work will be done at both ends of the line and will continue until the new section is tied in.

Mr. Nuzum said the schedule will be subject to satisfactory weather conditions.

The relocation of some 2,200 feet of the transmission line was necessary due to the modernization of Route 40 in the Long Hill section.

The last section of the line was laid by the contracting firm on Friday.

Two Washington, D. C. residents were injured yesterday in an automobile accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike about five miles west of the Somerset Interchange.

The driver of the car, Miss Patricia Cavada, 19, was treated in the hospital dispensary. She sustained a laceration of the forehead.

She reportedly was attempting to pass a tractor-trailer and misjudged the distance, authorities said.

Women Can Be Officers

Major Irvin Selko, Baltimore, commander of Air Force recruiting in this area, states that the recent Presidential request for an increase in military manpower also includes "woman power."

The Air Force has an increased need for women to train to become commissioned officers, he said. As officers in the AF, women receive the same pay, prestige, travel and promotion opportunities as male officers.

Basic qualifications for entrance into officers training are college graduate, single, between ages of 20½ and 30, in good physical condition and an American citizen.

Selected applicants attend the three-month officer training school near San Antonio, Texas. Upon completion of OTS, the trainees are commissioned as second lieutenants and sent to further schooling or to one of the many positions open to women.

Further information may be obtained from T/Sgt. Albert Hammed and S/Sgt. Harold Harlow, local Air Force recruiters, at the Post Office Building.

Md. Democrats Focus Efforts On Senate

Party Attacks Sen. Butler

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Democrat has not represented Maryland in the U. S. Senate since 1952, a fact which promises to draw a concentrated campaign effort from Maryland's Democratic forces.

One of the two Senate seats has been occupied by Republican John Marshall Butler since 1950, when he defeated the late Millard E. Tydings. That one is up for election next year, and Butler intends to seek a third term.

Maryland's junior senator, J. Glenn Beall, also a Republican, was elected in 1952, succeeding the late Herbert R. O'Connor Sr., also a former Maryland governor. In a statement released Saturday, a Democratic party leader attacked the legislative record of Butler.

The statement by Dr. Clarence D. Long, executive co-chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, was aimed particularly at Butler's stand on the housing, minimum wage and area redevelopment programs of the Kennedy Administration. Butler voted against each of those bills, a move which prompted Long to accuse the senator of "blithely ignoring the needs of the state."

Cities Redevelopment

"Apparently," said Long, "Sen. Butler was unaware that the President's area redevelopment program has particular significance to Garrett County and to the Cumberland, Hagerstown and Cambridge areas."

Long noted that each has qualified for federal assistance under the area redevelopment program. Detailed redevelopment plans submitted by Hagerstown and Cambridge officials have been approved, and Cambridge already has received $213,000 to improve sewage facilities.

In other weekend developments, Democratic gubernatorial candidate George P. Mahoney squelched any ideas party leaders might have of a "harmony ticket" headed by Gov. Tawes, and David Hume, another candidate for governor, renewed his attack on Southern Maryland slot machine interests.

Mahoney said some Democrats were asking this question: "Why can't we have another harmony ticket like in 1958 and avoid a bitter primary?"

"Harmony From Discord?"

He replied, "In view of the general unpopularity of the Tawes Administration, it is unrealistic to wish for a harmony ticket headed by Mr. Tawes in 1962."

"The governor and his cronies can hardly expect to pluck harmony from the discord which they have created."

Mahoney, who will be seeking the gubernatorial nomination for the third time, heads a ticket which includes Del. Blair Lee III, D-Montgomery, for U. S. senator, and State Sen. Samuel Barrick, D-Fredrick, for state attorney general.

The only other major candidate so far in the Senate race is Rep. Daniel Brewster, D-Md., who has been aligned with the ticket Gov. Tawes is expected to head. Tawes still has not detailed his intentions for 1962.

While declining to point to anyone in particular, Hume claimed that Southern Maryland politicians have reserved comment about gambling activities in Southern Maryland because that industry is the source of sizable campaign contributions.

Hume, former treasurer of the Maryland Democratic Party, has long been a leader in the fight against slot machines. He said Saturday he was certain a federal investigation would show that financial interest in Southern Maryland's slots "stretches far beyond the boundaries of this state."

A Washington attorney, Hume lives in Charles County, one of four in Southern Maryland where slot machines and commercial bingo are legal. The other counties are Anne Arundel, Calvert and St. Marys.

The telegram said its signers were "particularly embarrassed over the indifference and lack of leadership shown by Maryland officialdom" in respect to anti-discrimination legislation.
